TYPHOON SINKS SUBMARINE AND SHIPS IN HARBOR OF HONGKONG

Only One Sailor Known to Have Been Saved From L-9 and Two Persons Reported Saved From Ming Sang, of British Registry, and Heavy Life Loss Is Feared.

130-MILE-AN-HOUR WIND RECORDED

With Bombs Announcing Coming of Center of Storm, Steamer Is Swept in to Doom With Siren Blowing for Help—Rescue Effort in Vain.

By the Associated Press.

HONGKONG, Aug. 18. — Heavy loss of life is believed to have been caused by a typhoon that struck the harbor here at 9:20 o'clock this morning, sweeping the waters into a seething menace that flung several ships into their depths and tossed others into havens of refuge. Many Europeans were among the victims, it is feared.

The British submarine L-9 and the Steamer Ming Sang of British registry, sank in the harbor. Only one sailor is known to have been saved from the submarine and there are but two reported survivors from the Ming Sang, both European officers.

With harbor communications paralyzed, it is impossible to give an estimate of the number of lives lost and the damage caused. In the city, business has been suspended and police and soldiers have been massed along the water front.

It was the worst storm experienced here since 1906. Following observatory warnings, ocean-going steamers and small craft sought shelter last night. Bomb fire signalized the approach of the storm center this morning. Within an hour the wind was blowing with hurricane force and the harbor was tempestuous.

Steamer Goes Down.

The steamer Ming Sang whistled long blasts of distress. A blue tunnel towboat made a heroic attempt to reach the stricken vessel. The high running sea made the rescue impossible, and the Ming Sang went down. Except for the two officers reported saved, all aboard are believed to have perished.

The Ming Sang, owned by the Indo-China Steam Navigation Co., was of 1650 net tonnage.

The British submarine L-9, parting from her moorings, drifted westward and sank off the Hongkong Club. One sailor swam away, holding fast to a small yacht buoy, until another buoy was thrown from the endangered Japanese steamer Ginyo Maru and the British bluejacket was pulled safely aboard.

The Ginyo Maru and another vessel, the Sekino Maru, had drifted from their moorings. The Sekino Maru was brought up alongside a pier, to which she was able to moor undamaged. The Ginyo drifted toward the Royal navy yard sea wall, where she grounded astern, slightly damaged.

The liner Empress of Australia cleared from the wharf at Kowloon, a suburb, last night, moored in midstream and successfully outrode the typhoon.

The French mail liner Andre Lebon was swept, dragging her anchor, a considerable distance, and came perilously near fouling the Empress of Australia.

Several more casualties afloat were reported later in the afternoon. The British naval oil tanker Larkb, a naval tug, and the Chinese-owned steamer Haldis went ashore. The roof of the Victoria jail was damaged seriously. Several houses were partly unroofed. One Chinese house collapsed and two bodies were recovered from the debris. A motor car was buried under beams blown from the house.

Wind Velocity 130 Miles an Hour.

The lowest point reached by the barometer was 28.66.

At 10:13 a. m., the wind blew 130 miles an hour—said to be the highest velocity on record. After that the barometer rose rapidly.

An eye-witness to the sinking of the British steamer Ming Sang told of the gallant attempt by a party ashore—comprising sanitary and revenue officers, a Norwegian seaman and one Chinese—to rescue the crew. While the storm was at its height they volunteered to improvise a life line with a rope at the pierhead and to carry it out to the sink-

CARBURETOR 'BIGGEST GASOLINE THIEF,' FEDERAL TESTS SHOW

Experiments by Bureau of Mines Said to Have Resulted in 22 Per Cent Saving in Gas in Month.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—The biggest gasoline thief of them all is the carburetor, according to the Bureau of Mines.

To increase the efficiency of its fleet of motor trucks, the bureau perfected a portable instrument which analyzes scientifically the exhaust gases, and as a result of consequent carburetor readjustments, found that the saving in gas for the first month amounted to 22 per cent.

An announcement passing the good news along to motorists today said carburetor guess work was no longer necessary and that further details of the experiments could be obtained by addressing the bureau direct.

MELLON RETURNS, DENIES TAKING UP REPARATIONS WITH FRANCE

Will Confer With Coolidge Before He Announces Whether He Will Stay in Cabinet.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, returned from Europe last night on the Aquitania. He said the trip was undertaken solely for recreation and that at no time had governmental business intruded. Reports that he had discussed the reparations situation with Premier Poincare were not true, Mellon said.

Asked if he intended to remain in the cabinet, Secretary Mellon said his understanding was that President Coolidge desired him to remain, at least for the time being. Until he has talked with the new President he will not be in a position to say whether he will remain a member of Mr. Coolidge's official family permanently, he explained.

Mellon said he was greatly shocked by President Harding's sudden death.

FEDERAL HOME BUILDERS TO RESIST A RECEIVERSHIP

Corporation Announces It May File Counter Action to Suit of Contract-Holder.

INQUIRIES BY 200 PERSONS REPORTED

Better Business Bureau Announces Results of Investigatin of Operations Reported in Advertisements.

The Federal Home Building Corporation, for which a receiver was asked in Circuit Court yesterday, recently stated in an advertisement that it had contracted with 400 St. Louisans to build them homes costing a total of $3,500,000.

On the basis of a requirement of a minimum of 10 per cent payment at the time of signature of the contract, it is computed that the company has collected approximately $350,000 since it began business early this year.

The corporation also announced recently that it had 30 houses under construction. The Better Business Bureau of the Advertising Club announced today that it had checked up this list. It found, it reported, that four of the addresses listed were vacant lots, that seven were lots on which excavation had been made, that foundations had been partly constructed on six, that two houses were 65 per cent complete and that the remainder were from 15 to 50 per cent complete.

200 Inquiries Reported.

The Bureau stated also today that since the home building corporation had begun to advertise its willingness to build homes with a smaller initial payment than is common practice, it had received approximately 200 inquiries from persons who had signed contracts or were considering signing. Among these 200 were persons, the bureau said, who complained that they had signed contracts in March, April and May and that the corporation had done nothing toward construction.

To persons contemplating signature of contracts, the Bureau pointed out that the contracts of the corporation reserved for itself decision as to what constituted a house of stated value. For example, the Bureau pointed out, the person contracting for a $7000 house faced the necessity of accepting the corporation's opinion as to what constituted a $7000 house.

Counter Suit May Be Filed.

E. J. Barrett, general manager of the corporation said today that it planned to resist the receivership action and indicated it would bring a counter suit against H. W. Felter, who brought the receivership action. The case was set for a hearing on Aug. 30, in an order issued today by Circuit Judge Mix directing the defendants to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed.

The following summary of building operations was given a Post-Dispatch reporter by company officers: Five houses completed, approximately 50 about to be started or in some stage of construction; plans and specifications drawn for 185 houses, and estimates and preliminary plans being made on 165 contracts.

Contracts with prospective home builders are made on a basis of the actual cost, plus 10 per cent, it was said. The first payment required under the plan is 10 to 12½ per cent of the total. When the house is turned over to the contract holder, he executes a first deed of trust due in three years for approximately 60 per cent of the balance and a second deed of trust, covering the remainder to be paid in 30 monthly payments.

On inquiry it was stated that the contract holder was given a guarantee that he might renew the first deed when it was due, six months after completion of the 30 payments under the second deed.

Allegations in Suit.

Felter is a hardware dealer at 5174 Easton avenue. His allegations are substantially as follows: He paid the company $1902 at the time he applied for a contract for the construction of a building with the reservation that the corporation would draw up and submit a contract. In the event that the contract was unsatisfacory, his first payment was to be refunded. The contract submitted was unsatisfactory but the corporation declined to make the refund.

He makes other general allegations—that undue high salaries are being paid to officers and, though the corporation has contracts for the erection of buildings for 2500 persons, it is proceeding with the construction of a relatively small number. He adds that he believes that the corporation is insolvent.

Barrett declared Felter never made a demand on the company for return of any money. "Felter and

Mrs. Harding Bids Farewell to the White House

Goes to McLean Home, Where She Will Remain Till Return to Marion—Coolidge to Move In Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Quietly and almost unnoticed Mrs. Florence Kling Harding last night left the White House, never to return, except possibly as a guest.

None of the crowds, none of the cheers, none of the excitement and none of the pleasurable anticipation that marked her arrival at the executive mansion on March 4, 1921, attended the departure in the gloom of a rainy night. The contrast was so noticeable that those who accompanied her away were plainly moved, but Mrs. Harding herself, whatever may have been her inner emotions, walked out of the door, across the portico and into the waiting automobile as calmly as she has passed through all the succession of the trying hours that have been her lot in the last 15 days.

Shortly before 6 o'clock an automobile drew up to the north portico. It had waited for more than half an hour when another, bearing the coat of arms of the President of the United States, drove up and from it stepped Mrs. Coolidge, the new first lady of the land. She passed within the mansion and it was half an hour later and almost dark before there was another sign of activity.

Two secret service men, the one who has been assigned to Mrs. Harding from the time her late husband was elected President and the one detailed to Mrs. Coolidge came out, and then Major Ora M. Baldinger, the military aide to the late President who was selected by Mrs. Harding for the post because he had been one of the newsboys when she had charge of the circulation department of the Marion Star.

Dressed in mouring, but without a veil, Mrs. Harding stepped out, followed by Mrs. Coolidge and George B. Christian Jr., secretary to the late President. Without glancing back and with only one glance to the side at three newspaper men present to watch her departure, she walked with firm step to the automobile, was helped in by Secretary Christian, who after assisting Mrs. Coolidge into the car, stepped inside himself.

Meantime, Miss Laura Harlan, secretary to Mrs. Harding, and Miss Ruth Powderly, who was Mrs. Harding's nurse during her illness a year ago and was nurse to Mr. Harding in his fatal illness, had gotten into the second car. Then, without a word from anyone the automobiles moved down the graveled driveway, out one of the northern gates and out into Pennsylvania avenue.

Mrs. Harding went to "Friendship," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. McLean, on the edge of Washington. There she expects to stay probably 10 days or two weeks before going to Marion to attend to the settlement of the late President's estate.

Although the White House is in readiness for them, President and Mrs. Coolidge do not expect to take up their residence there before the middle of next week.

MEMPHIS WOMAN AND CHILD POISONED BY GIFT CANDY

Railroad Switchman Held on Story of Negro Boy Who Made Delivery, and Druggist.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 18.—Calvin Harris, 41, railroad switchman, held on charges of attempt to commit murder, denied today that he was the sender of poisoned candy which resulted in the critical illness of Mrs. H. C. Anderson, wife of a railroad engineer, and 5-year-old Jackie Mason, after questioning by the police.

The police preferred charges of attempt to commit murder by poisoning in two cases after the negro boy who delivered the candy is said to have identified Harris and a druggist was found who was quoted as saying he sold poison to the accused man.

Mrs. Anderson and the child, a roomer at the Anderson home, were taken violently ill after they had eaten two pieces from a box of candy delivered by the negro youth. According to the boy's story, he was hired by a man he did not know, to deliver the package to the Anderson dwelling, with a promise of pay when he returned to the corner where the man arranged with him to go on the errand. When he returned, the negro said, the man had disappeared.

Both Mrs. Anderson and the child are recovering.

According to police, Harris formerly was a roomer at the Anderson dwelling but quarreled with Anderson and left. He is said to have admitted friendship for Anderson's stepdaughter, a 15-year-old girl, but declared that that friendship began when she was an infant and that he had frequently given her gifts.

COOLIDGE CANCELS ENGAGEMENTS HE MADE WHILE VICE PRESIDENT

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 18.—Because of a press of public business, President Coolidge has canceled all engagements made while he was Vice President, it became known here today.

In a letter to H. B. Wassell, general chairman of the Pittsburg Committee for the Phi Gamma Delta convention, to be held here, the President said it would be impossible for him to attend, adding that he had cancelled all engagements which he made as Vice President.

While in college, President Coolidge was a member of the Amherst chapter of the fraternity.

WIDOW LOSES HUSBAND BEFORE HER HONEYMOON

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.
(Copyright, 1923.)

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Eight days after her marriage and before her honeymoon had even started, Mrs. Alice Shedden finds herself minus her husband, her jewels and her money. All three left at the same time. Scotland Yard is looking for the missing husband in the belief that if they find him they will find the rest.

Mrs. Shedden, a wealthy New York widow, and a friend, Miss Louise Holden, left New York in July for a trip to Europe. In Berlin they met Alexander Gordon, who said he was on the staff of an American newspaper which had sent him to Russia to write a series of articles on finance. Soon he proposed to Mrs. Shedden and was rejected. Undismayed, he followed her to London and finally his good manners, entertaining talk of his travels and apparent means impressed Mrs. Shedden and she consented to marry him.

On Aug. 7, Gordon went to the Registry office and gave notice of the marriage, saying he and his prospective bride had been living at the Savoy Hotel for the three weeks necessary to establish a residence for marriage. However, Gordon had only lived there two days and Mrs. Shedden not much longer.

Two days later they were married. Miss Shedden described herself as a widow, 38, daughter of the late William Henry Kearney, New York tea importer. Gordon said he was 37, a financial broker and son of the late Morris Gordon, real estate broker.

Gordon did not live with his wife, but made various business excuses to postpone the honeymoon. Finally they decided to go to Paris and Tuesday Mrs. Shedden gave him a large sum of money to be changed into francs. Gordon never came back and later his wife missed her jewel case with $6000 worth of gems.

Last night she told her story to Scotland Yard. Detectives broadcast a description of Gordon and are watching all ports and seaside resorts.

MRS. W. E. D. STOKES SUES STEPSON FOR $1,000,000

Charges His Depositions in His Father's Divorce Suit Were Injurious to Her.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—The praecipe in a damage suit for $1,000,000 against W. E. D. Stokes Jr., wealthy New York clubman, was filed in the Superior Court here yesterday by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein in behalf of Mrs. Helen Ellwood Stokes.

Mrs. Stokes, here last night, said her suit against her stepson had been started as a result of young Stokes' allegations of indiscretions with her, made in connection with his father's divorce action. While young Stokes did not testify, Mrs. Stokes asserts he made depositions that were injurious to her. She declared she had traced every person who had anything to do with accusations against her and that "I'm now after the last one of them."

ACTING GOVERNOR OF TEXAS MOVES TO END FLOGGINGS

Detachment of Rangers Sent to Port Arthur After Report of Two Kidnapings Last Night.

MAN BEATEN WITH ROPE AT IOWA PARK

County Officers Said to Have Made No Effort to Arrest Guilty — Rangers on Duty at Amarillo.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 18.—Acting Gov. Davidson today took steps to quell reported floggings of citizens in two additional Texas towns. A detachment of State rangers was ordered to Port Arthur, where two citizens are reported to have been kidnaped by unknown persons last night. An investigation was instituted into the whipping on Wednesday night of Lonnie Davis, farmer, at Iowa Park, near Wichita Falls, and rangers probably will be ordered to inquire into the affair, Davidson stated. Rangers already are at Amarillo and have made investigations in connection with the brutal flogging Tuesday night of E. E. McDonald, railroad laborer.

Request for rangers to handle the situation at Port Arthur was received by Acting Gov. Davidson from District Judge McDowell. The message stated the situation there was tense. Ranger Capt. Roy Nichols stationed at Marshall, with two rangers, was ordered to proceed to Port Arthur, and Ranger Capt. R. W. Aldrich, in charge of range headquarters, will leave here today also.

Requests for rangers at Iowa Park was received from Z. W. Davis, brother of the flogging victim there. The telegram from Davis stated that it was generally believed "County officers are making no effort to secure arrests of guilty mob." The acting Governor said he had requested further information from Wichita County authorities.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Aug. 18.—Investigation has been authorized by the State executive offices at Austin into the severe flogging of Lonnie Davis, following an appeal by Z. W. Davis, brother of the stricken victim, and by his father, an elderly farmer.

Davis, stripped of his clothing, was beaten with a wet rope by five unmasked men Wednesday night, his skin torn open in a number of places and his body blackened by welts and lacerations.

After remaining a day at the County hospital at Iowa Park, 10 miles from here, Davis showed no improvement and was transferred to the general hospital here yesterday. His condition is critical.

Flogged Man's Story.

According to his own story, he had just returned from an automobile ride, arriving in Iowa Park about 10 o'clock Wednesday night.

He said he met Hamp Love, city marshal of Iowa Park, and got into the latter's car and went to a garage. Davis said Love went inside to put up the car while he waited outside. While the officer was inside the garage, Davis said, five unmasked men drove up in a car, placed a sack over his head and drove away at high speed.

Davis said that after they had driven a few miles out on a lonely road, the men ordered him to get out of the automobile. They then ordered him to remove his clothing, laid him on the ground and pelted him with the wet rope. He did not recognize any of his assailants.

The farmer was driven back to Iowa Park and turned loose.

Armed Farmers Visit Town.

Armed with shotguns, farmer friends of the Davis family appeared in Iowa Park yesterday evening and passed many open comments as to what would happen if the kidnapers were found, Iowa Park peace officers have reported.

Sheriff Murphy and his deputies went to Iowa Park last night and started an investigation.

It was because the investigation was considered unsatisfactory by the Davis family and their friends that telegrams were dispatched by the brother and the father to the State executive offices last night.

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 18.—The Texas Rangers' personal investigation of the flogging by five unmasked men of E. E. McDonald, bridge worker, last Wednesday night, tightened up today. Five arrests have followed the Rangers' arrival here under orders of Acting Gov. Davidson, the fifth arrest that

PUT WORD OF HOPE IN STORIES, COOLIDGE TELLS NEWSPAPER MEN

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.

NEWSPAPER correspondents who met President Coolidge yesterday in the second formal press conference he has held since he took over the duties of chief executive, were urged to put "a word of gladness and hope" into the stories obtained in the course of the conference.

Concluding his talk with the newspaper men with an expression of thanks to them for having called, Mr. Coolidge hesitated just as the men were leaving and added:

"As the personal staff of the Government you will, I hope, put a word of gladness and hope into what you write this evening."

CHASE AND 3 ARRESTS FOLLOW 2 HOLDUPS

Fourth Man Escapes When Deputies Stop Machine on Olive Street Road.

Four men in an automobile, driving north on Denny road toward Olive street road, at 10:30 o'clock last night, were so suspicious looking that Deputy Sheriffs Roth and Cartwright, St. Louis County night riders, who were driving south, turned and pursued.

The chase, at a speed of 55 to 70 miles an hour, was to the Olive street road and east to Spring avenue, a distance of about four miles. The four men discovered that they were being pursued and put on speed. When they were overtaken and forced to stop, one of them jumped out and plunged through a hedge and escaped.

The three were arrested. They said they were Harry Stansberry, 21 years old, of Chicago, staying at the Union Hotel, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue; Albert Golden, 19 of 4973 Magnolia avenue, and Harvey L. Barton, 22, of Chicago, staying on Michigan avenue, St. Louis. In the machine was found a signet ring.

They were locked up at Clayton, where they were identified by Harry Molos, 4315 Page avenue, as three of four men who held him up as he was driving at 9:30 p. m. in Forest Park near the boathouse, with Miss Rose Winstein of 1443 Semple avenue. They took from him $17 and the signet ring and compelled him to drive them to Clayton and Denny roads, where they made him and Miss Winstein get out and drove away with the machine.

Robert Bock of 4513 Chouteau avenue identified them as having robbed him of $20 as he was driving on Denny road at 10 p. m. with Miss Esther Helberg of Wellston.

The deputies went back to the stolen automobile and found near it a cameo ring and a 38-caliber revolver.

FRENCH DEBT PAYMENT NOT DEPENDENT ON REPARATIONS

Poincare, in Reply to British Note, Treats on Interallied Debt, but Does Not Link Obligation to U. S. With Collection of Like Sum From Berlin.

TEXT OF ANSWER SENT TO BRUSSELS

Will Be Published Monday Simultaneously With the Belgian Note—Paris Hopes Discussion Will Lead to General Allied Conference.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—While Premier Poincare's summary of the French position in the note which will be delivered to the British Government Monday treats of the inter-allied debts at some length, he does not, as reported in some quarters, make payment of France's debt to the United States dependent upon recovery of a similar amount on the Class C reparation bonds from Germany, it was said at the Foreign Office today.

The French attitude is that the war debt to America shall be paid and that in order to pay it France must get from Germany an equal amount out of the Class C bonds, but this does not mean that if France fails to collect from Germany, she will repudiate her own debt.

The war debts are considered in French official circles as less pressing than the question of reparations and smoothing out the troubles of the entente, as final solution of the reparations problem, it is held, will make possible earlier settlement of the war debt. France consequently considers the negotiations for funding her war debt to the United States as in abeyance for the moment.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The text of Premier Poincare's reply to the British reparations note of Aug. 11 was forwarded to the French Ambassador in Brussels late this afternoon with instructions to deliver it immediately to the Belgian Government. It will be published Monday, simultaneously with the Belgian answer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Premier Poincare's reply to the last British note, sent to Brussels last night, is 10,000 words long, the original all written in his own hand.

The first-half consists of the British case and French replies to it, point by point. The second half comprises a recapitulation of the French reparation plan of last January, including the old "productive guarantees," plus some new clauses to satisfy Belgium.

Premier Baldwin and Foreign Secretary Curzon are vacationing in France. It is believed Baldwin has decided to hear what the League of Nations has to say about things in general next month before writing his next note to France or electing to go ahead with separate action toward Germany. Also it is said the dominions insist he submit the whole problem of Britain's European relations to the imperial conference in October before determining on a vital course.

Meanwhile, all this open diplomacy is perhaps not a bad thing; the Quai d'Orsay even goes the length today of expressing the hope it might lead to a general allied conference.

For the moment, however, French eyes are mostly turned toward Chancellor Stresemann. The press debates whether he intends being another Cuno or will back negotiations, which are undoubtedly afoot in the Ruhr between the local industrialists and the occupational authorities regarding his Franco-German industrial deal on a percentage basis.

FIGHT IS BEGUN FOR REMOVAL OF REICHSBANK HEAD

German Finance Minister Says President and Vice President Hamper Stabilization of Currency.

FINANCIAL REFORMS PLANNED AT ONCE

Situation So Precarious, Government Holds Officials Must Step Out or Reichstag Will Act.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK.
(Copyright, 1923.)

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—Big business and Chancellor Stresemann came to blows today. The decision as to who wins will have to be made by the Reichstag when it convenes next week.

The industrial barons and the bankers under their influence let it be known they no longer think the masses are going to take the law into their own hands. Therefore, say the Industrialists, there is no use of remedial financial legislation involving a sacrifice of their profits.

Want Tax Moratorium.

They will demand that a moratorium be granted on the new gold taxes and they will whip up a campaign against the partial confiscation of property plan for paying reparations and establishing a new currency. Big business thinks the cheapest way for them to get peace is to bargain with the French industrialists and let the State get along as best it can.

The battle at the moment centers around Rudolph Havenstein, president of the Reichsbank for a lifetime. Finance Minister Hilferding and his Socialist associates charge Havenstein is sabotaging the Government's plans by continuing to issue paper credits, which would nullify the new scheme.

Through their organ, Vorwaerts, the new formidable Socialist party served notice that unless Havenstein quits within three days, the Reichstag will be called upon to get him out of the way by means of new legislation. Havenstein's exit would be a victory for the Government, a victory for the plan of putting Germany's house in order before talking peace.

The currency situation is at present so precarious that the Government feels it cannot have Havenstein remain even for a week in the face of his record for handing out paper mark credits to the industrialists and which they use to speculate.

Enormous Currency Increase.

Beginning next week, 30,000,000,000,000 marks will be issued daily. At the end of the week it is expected there will be 200,000,000,000,000 in circulation with a total of 1,000,000,000,000,000 just around the corner, thus creeping nearer and nearer the Russian circulation. Despite this bewildering flood of paper the scarcity of money continues as prices continue to mount far above a dollar parity.

Hilferding and Stresemann feel that their financial reforms, to be of any value, must go through at once and further delay would be dangerous.

From sources close to the Chancellor, I am informed he believes big business can be driven to make the sacrifices the Government demands by another mass uprising such as ushered in the new Government. But this time, the Government is going to take pains to let the people know just who is responsible for the obstruction.

Arrangements Made for Floating of Belgian Loan in France.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Finance Minister De Lasteyrie and M. Lepreux, vice-governor of the Bank of Belgium, at a conference today reached an agreement concerning the loan of 400,000,000 French francs which the Belgian Government intends floating in the Paris market soon. It is understood the loan will bear six per cent interest and will mature in 16 years. The proceeds will be used exclusively to finance Belgian commercial operations in France.

Circulating Currency to Be Doubled in Week.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—Although the Reichsbank's total circulating currency is estimated well above one hundred trillion marks, it is believed this sum will be more than doubled during the coming week, owing to the fantastic demands for currency, caused by heavy wage increases in all lines.

The most popular denomination now is the 1,000,000-mark note, which is viewed as "convenient fractional currency."

Questioning of requisitioning the Reichsbank's slowly ebbing gold reserve, with the purpose of backing up the new internal gold loan, already is precipitating warm discussion, opponents of the plan demanding that the remaining half billion marks remain intact that the gold may be mobilized at the proper moment as the crux for a new currency system.

of Sheriff Less Whitaker of Potter County, last night.

Texas Ranger Capt. F. A. Hamer, filed the charges which resulted in the Sheriff being placed under arrest. The complaints were twofold, one charging conspiracy to commit a felony, the other alleging the Sheriff to have been an accomplice in an assault with a prohibited weapon.

Judge C. G. Landis fixed Whitaker's bond at $2500 on each charge. The bond was quickly made. T. W. Sanford, charged jointly with the Sheriff, was granted a similar bond.

The Sheriff was elected to the office while managing a union laundry and his friends today alleged that opponents of unionism and personal enemies instituted the charges against him.

District Attorney Fletcher today declared that Whitaker could remain in office pending action of the grand jury which will convene Aug 27.

Two Men Spirited Away From Police Station and Beaten.

By the Associated Press.

PORT ARTHUR, Tex., Aug. 18.—Badly beaten but both refusing to make a statement to the police as to what transpired after they were spirited away from the police station here at 10:45 last night, Clay Dunn and his brother, Carl Dunn, were found in bed at their respective homes at 9 o'clock this morning.

Chief of Police Covington and a patrolman found the men when they called at their homes. Asked if they had recognized any members of the mob that kidnaped them, both men said that they did, but declined to make a statement as to who they were. They thanked the police officers for offering assistance.

The Dunn brothers, who had been arrested in connection with the slaying Thursday night of B. A. Harris, a city detective, had just been released under bond last night when they were seized by unidentified men, thrown into an automobile and spirited away.

Police said they warned the brothers there was danger of violence if they left the jail last night. Six other men who had made bond on charges in connection with the killing of Detective Harris, spent the night in the Jefferson County jail.

NO EXCUSE FOR HIGHER 'GAS,' M'MASTER SAYS

South Dakota Governor Asserts Public Should Buy Its Own if Standard Boosts Price.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 18.—Gasoline price, retail, was cut from 19 to 18 cents here today. Companies declared it was not a price war but the result of accumulated stocks.

By the Associated Press.

PIERRE, S. D., Aug. 18.—Under present market conditions there would be no excuse or justification for the Standard Oil Co. to raise the price of gasoline in the Middle West states, owing to the fact that it has been raised four cents in South Dakota, and, in the event that they contemplate such action, the public must immediately begin making its own purchases. Gov. W. H. McMaster of South Dakota declared yesterday afternoon in a statement to the Associated Press.

The Governor's statement follows:

"Dispatches from Chicago state that the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana is contemplating raising the price of oil throughout the Middle West states, owing to the fact that I have consented to a four-cent raise in the State of South Dakota.

"That information, given out by the Standard Oil Co., is misleading to the public. The facts of the case are that the original cut made in South Dakota was 10½ cents a gallon, which was cost price. This drastic action was taken to bring about a reasonable reduction in price.

"The raise which goes into effect in South Dakota Saturday is of four cents a gallon, but that still leaves a reduction of six and six-tenths cents a gallon in this State, in conformity with the reduction which has been made in all of the Middle West States.

"Under present market conditions, there is absolutely no excuse or justification for the Standard Oil Co. to raise the price of oil in the Middle-Western states and, in the event that they contemplate such action, the public must immediately begin making its own purchases."

HENRY FORD JUST LAUGHS WHEN SHOWN BENSON'S PIECE

He Might Have Used Words Reported, But They Had no Importance.

By the Associated Press.

ESCANABA, Mich., Aug. 18.—Henry Ford laughed today when given a copy of a newspaper containing an article by Allan Benson, a magazine writer, which states that Mr. Ford wishes to become President.

When he was asked if he had indicated to Mr. Benson the name of a man whom he would make Secretary of the Navy if he were to become President, Mr. Ford said:

"I do not remember of ever saying any such thing, although I might have done so without having attached any great importance to it."

Continuing, Ford asked the correspondent:

"Would you like to be Governor of your state?"

The correspondent indicated that he had no desire to become the chief executive of his state.

"Undoubtedly you wouldn't, but that wouldn't stop you from naming some man whom you thought would fill a state position well, and saying that if you were the Governor you would appoint him. You could make a remark of this kind without even desiring to be Governor."

After a night spent on a foggy lake coming to Escanaba from Traverse City, Mich., the Ford party, including Thomas A. Edison, Harvey Firestone, and their wives, arrived in the Bay this morning and left for Iron Mountain in the caravan at 10 o'clock.

GEN. BLISS SUGGESTS NAMING WORLD ADVICE COMMISSION

Declares Body Composed of Business Men Would Be an Aid in Maintaining Peace.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 18.—As an aid to maintaining peace, Major-General Tasker H. Bliss, in an address at the Institute of Politics, today suggested the creation of a permanent commission of information and advice representing the best business sentiment of half a dozen nations. He said the function of such a body would be to study the business conditions that affect the relations of states and that its frequent reports should influence public opinion.

"Disarmament is impossible under present conditions," he said. "My belief is that the question of armament like other grave ones pending between the nations, is a business one; that they will not be settled by the moralist or the altruist, but by the creation, independently, of the Governments, by business of a sentiment in the mass of the people that political Governments must take note of."

He expressed the opinion that if the Governments of France and Germany had stood aside and left their business men handle the question of the Ruhr, it could have been settled.

his attorney called on me several days ago," Barrett stated, "and said he wanted to draw up his own contract to erect an apartment. I agreed to permit him to submit a contract for our approval. This was submitted to our attorney and returned to me only yesterday. It was roughly drawn and Felter was to redraft it after our corporation approved it."

C. W. Beck, a real estate man, who promoted the Delmar Garden subdivision, is president of the company. He and Barrett are the only officers active in conduct of the business, it was said. Barrett formerly was salesmanager of the Lincoln Fiscal Agency, the fiscal company for the Lincoln Housing Trust. The latter company, now in the hands of a receiver, since repeal of the housing trust law, is planning to reorganize as a building and loan association.

Financing of the Federal company has been carried on thus far with the first payments on contracts, totaling between 10 and 12½ per cent of the face value of the outstanding contracts. However, a plan was under consideration, officers said, for organization of a subsidiary company which would take over the deeds of trust executed on houses completed by the Federal company, and all details of financing would be handled by the subsidiary concern.

SAUNDERS QUITS AS HEAD OF CORPORATION

Files Suit for Receiver for Parent Piggly Wiggly Organization.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 18.—Clarence Saunders yesterday resigned as president of the Piggly Wiggly Corporation and transferred to the courts the fight which has been waged for several months within the organization with the filing of a petition in United States District Court asking the appointment of a receiver for the corporation, parent Piggly Wiggly organization and holder of patents under which Piggly Wiggly stores throughout the country operate.

Filing of the suit came between meetings of the Board of Directors called by Saunders to devise means of financing and elimination of loans which he declared essential to the continued success of the concern.

Immediately after the suit was filed the directorate of the company met, accepted the resignation of Saunders and of Fletcher Scott, vice president, and C. C. Walker, secretary-treasurer, elected John P. Bullington of Memphis, temporary vice president, and E. W. Rollow, temporary treasurer, and announced that the petition for a receiver would be "vigorously resisted."

The office of president was not filled at the meeting which adjourned until Aug. 25.

The following statement was issued by a spokesman for the Board of Directors after a meeting of the directorate which was in session for two hours:

"Mr. Clarence Saunders, just a few minutes before resigning as president of the Piggly Wiggly Corporation filed a bill as a stockholder in the company asking for receiver. The board stated that the business will be run as usual, that there was no justification or occasion for the bill and that will be vigorously resisted and they are confident of success."

PRISONER AND GIRL RECENTLY FREED WEDDED AT WORKHOUSE

Superintendent Morgan and Wife Witnesses at Ceremony Performed by Justice of the Peace.

The marriage of a city workhouse prisoner and a young woman, who was recently a prisoner there, in the Workhouse office yesterday afternoon upheld the theory of a poet who once wrote:

"Stone walls do not a prison make Nor iron bars a cage."

The principals were William Mangold, 29 years old, of Flint, Mich., who is completing a year's term for forgery, and Miss Viola Potts, who gave her address as 1820 Menard street and age as 17, and who was freed several days ago after a three month's term for petty larceny.

When Miss Potts was released she obtained the license and arranged to have Justice of the Peace Pfeifer perform the ceremony. Mangold's cellmate was best man and a young woman friend was bride'smaid. Supt. Morgan and his wife were witnesses.

Mrs. Mangold will try to have her husband paroled.

SECOND DEATH FROM BRAWL IN SALOON

Theodore Orzel Dies From Stab Wound — Tony Beckman Was Shot Fatally.

The second death resulting from a fight among four men in a saloon at 2135 South Second street Wednesday night occurred today.

Theodore Orzel, 19 years old of 2107 South Fourth street, died at the City Hospital at 5:30 a. m. of a stab wound in the abdomen. Tony Beckman, 18, of 2208 South Third street died yesterday morning, the result of a bullet wound in the spine.

The police have the following account of the fight from the bartender, Alfred Benwell, 25, of 2214A South Fourth street, who has admitted that he shot Beckman:

Orzel and Beckman entered the saloon at 6:30 p. m., Beckman jumping on to the bar, sitting down and demanding a drink. Orzel approached William Helgoth, 49, of Webster Groves, and picked a quarrel with him. Beckman joined it. Benwell reproached the men, whereupon Beckman started toward Benwell.

Benwell said he seized a revolver and fired one shot at Beckman, who fell. When policemen arrived, they found that Orzel had been stabbed with a butcher knife, which had been removed from an accustomed place behind the bar and lay on the bar near the front of the saloon.

Beckman declined to say who shot him. Orzel was under the impression that his wound was a bullet wound also and declared he did not know who shot him.

An inquest, which was to have been held today, was adjourned to await further police investigation.

LEGAL ACTION THREATENED AGAINST 3 JUDGES AT JOPLIN

Prosecuting Attorney Insists on Publication of Opinion on Their Salary as Road Overseers.

The threat of action against members of the court was made by Prosecuting Attorney Roy Coyne upon refusal of Judge J. F. Lee to surrender for publication an opinion on the legality of the Judges receiving the money for road services. Judge Lee said he was retaining the opinion, handed down by Coyne and concurred in by Attorney-General Barrett until the return of another member of the court who is on a vacation. It is known the opinion is adverse to the County Court.

$1,000,000 OIL FIRE IN CALIFORNIA FIELD

Buildings and Munitions Stores at Fort McArthur Were Threatened by Blaze.

By the Associated Press.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Aug. 18.—Estimated damage of more than $1,000,000 was caused by an oil fire on the property of the General Petroleum Co. here yesterday. Early today, with the burned area guarded by soldiers, firemen, police and volunteer watchmen, the flames still burned, but were believed to have subsided beyond the danger of a further disastrous spread.

The fire fighters were attempting to prevent the consequences of a possible sudden shift of wind.

J. L. Martin, superintendent of pipe lines for the company, expressed the belief that the fire was of incendiary origin.

It started from an explosion in a 500,000 barrel tank, literally boiled over into a sump hole and threatened the military reservation of Fort McArthur, with its barracks, batteries and great stores of ammunition, as well as a large residential district before apparently burning itself out as a river of burning oil flowed down a canyon toward the sea.

60,000 Barrels of Oil Destroyed in Texas Fire.

A lightning bolt ignited the oil in one of the tanks Thursday afternoon. Several hours later the burning fluid boiled over the sides of the tank and ignited the contents of another container nearby. Efforts of fire fighters kept the flames from more than two score other tanks.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR LUCEY CO.; LIABILITIES $2,315,000

Manufacturers of Oil Well Machinery Have Branches in Four States and Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Lucey Manufacturing Co. of New York, manufacturers and distributers of oil well machinery, which owns or controls similar business in Texas, Tennessee, California, Wyoming and Mexico, was placed in the hands of receivers in equity in Federal Court yesterday.

The company's liabilities were fixed in excess of $2,315,000 in the petition for receivership, filed by the Manhattan River Co., a creditor.

Charles E. Miller and Thomas B. Baskerville, who were appointed receivers, said the company's difficulties were precipitated by the appointment of a receiver for its subsidiary, the Lucey Manufacturing Co. of Tennessee, several days ago, and that heavy inventory losses during 1921 and 1922 had made a reorganization imperative.

The defendant corporation owns all of the capital stock of the Lucey Manufacturing Co. of Tennessee, for which a receiver was named several days ago at the instance of Tennessee creditors. It owns also all of the capital stock of the General Supply Corporation of Casper, Wyo., [illegible] per cent of the capital stock of the Grand Tool Corporation of Los Angeles, and all of the stock of the Lucey Manufacturing Co. of Mexico. STRIKERS IN WATER DEPARTMENT VOTE TO REMAIN 'OUT

Action of Union Follows Statement by Wall They Must Return Today or Lose Jobs.

MEETING TODAY ON SETTLEMENT PLAN

Union Leader Says Only Obstacle Is Commissioner's Refusal to Reinstate a Few Men, Charged With Violence.

The 97 Water Department pipelayers, section men and laborers, who went on strike July 28 for a half holiday on Saturdays, last night voted to continue the strike unless Water Commissioner Wall recedes from his position not to reinstate certain of the strikers, who, he said, have been guilty of overt acts against non-union employes who took the strikers' jobs. Wall had given an ultimatum to the strikers that unless they returned to work at noon today, none would be taken back. This notice was ignored in last night's deliberations.

Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council, will confer today with leaders of the strikers to determine a plan of action looking to a settlement of the strike.

Statement for Strikers.

"We are willing to return to work at once provided Commissioner Wall withdraws his objection to a few men, less than 10, who, he claims, have been guilty of violent acts against the strikebreakers," said Patrick M. Sullivan, one of the union leaders. "He is paying nearly double the wage to strikebreakers that our men are willing to work for, although the Board of Estimate and Apportionment has ruled that there be no increase in salaries this year. I see no obstacle to a settlement of this trouble except, perhaps, Commissioner Wall's dislike of a few men."

Mayor Kiel has been appealed to by the union leaders, but has referred them to Wall, asserting that it is "Wall's fight" and that he will not interfere with even so much as a suggestion to the Water Commissioner.

Chamber Upholds Wall.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday adopted a resolution commending Wall's stand and calling upon the Mayor and Board of Aldermen to support him, pointing out that the position he has taken is "vitally essential to the safety, health and welfare of the general public, and as necessary to proper discipline and morale of employes in the public service."

Some of the Aldermen have openly espoused the cause of the strikers.

Another conference with the Mayor or Wall may be sought early next week by the union leaders.

When informed of the union's action, Commissioner Wall said that, while he did not wish to appear as taking an arbitrary stand, he would go right ahead operating his department.

There are about three miles of new pipe line in North St. Louis to be laid this year, which Wall said he most likely would let to contractors, many of whom have expressed a willingness to do the work. Prior to 10 years ago contractors did this work, and with contractors doing it now, Wall said, he can get along with 30 men fewer. He now has 50 commission men at work and will employ more at once, he said.

BURGLARS LOOT SAFE OF $250

Burglars broke into the Luke Coal Co. office at 3922 North Broadway, hammered off the safe combination, but couldn't get the safe door open.

INQUIRY IN DEATH OF NEGRESS

Cook On Garbage Scow Said She Was Injured When Men Fought.

The police homicide squad is investigating the death at Marine Hospital yesterday of Nora Hickman, 29 years old, a negress, who was cook on the garbage scow Bessie Katz, belonging to a contractor who hauls city garbage. She was taken to the hospital in a taxicab Aug. 9 by a white man, who said he was cabin boy of the scow. She had concussion of the brain and a cut on the forehead.

She told a physician and a nurse, the detectives were informed, that two white men on the scow had been fighting and that she was hit accidentally by a glass thrown by one of them at the other. The crew of the scow will be interviewed when they return from a trip down the river. The cabin boy was arrested last night, to be held for the Coroner.

REPORTS ROBBERY TO POLICE, THEN ADMITS STORY IS HOAX

Joseph Faeth Said to Have Admitted Ruse to Arouse Sympathy of Creditor.

Joseph Faeth, 27 years old, of 5209 South Broadway, of the Faeth Brothers Express Co., suddenly jumped off his delivery truck near Seventh and Chestnut streets today and began shouting that he had been robbed. He dashed over Seventh street to an alley and through the alley to Eighth, calling for the police. Faeth told a patrolman that he had stopped his truck for a moment to make a minor repair and while thus engaged a robber, of whom he gave a minute description, snatched a tin box containing $275 from the seat and fled with it.

Faeth was taken to Police Headquarters and closely questioned, finally admitting, according to Lieut. Aylward, that there had been no robbery; that he invented the hoax to gain sympathy from a merchant who was pressing him for $57.50 for a mirror that had been broken in delivery.

HIGHER JURY FEES URGED

Chicago Grand Jury Says $3 Pay Is Not Sufficient.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—A living wage for grand jurors was asked in a resolution adopted by the Federal grand jury yesterday and presented to Federal Judges of the district, copies also being sent to the United States Senators from Illinois.

The resolution, while asking that any adjustment should not be to a higher figure than to "reasonably cover the average loss of time and the expense incurred," declared that the present pay of $3 a day probably was all right for a grand juror several years ago, but that no cognizance had been taken of increased living costs.

Cloudbursts Cause Three Rock Slides

By the Associated Press.

MONTROSE, Colo., Aug. 18.—Cloudbursts near Curecanti, Colo., in the Black Canyon of the Gunnison River, late yesterday caused three serious rock slides, according to messages received in Montrose. They tied up traffic on the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad's narrow gauge line between Salida and Montrose. The point at which the slides occurred near Curecanti are widely known to tourists.

SEIBEL TO BE ASKED ABOUT $4030 PAYMENT BY STATE

St. Louis County Court Votes to Question Former Clerk After Hearing Audit Company Report.

An explanation of the failure of the county to receive $4030.87, paid by the State of Missouri for its share of the cost of making tax books and other records in St. Louis County last year, will be asked of William Seibel, who was County Clerk for 12 years, up to Dec. 31 last, by the County Court, administrative body, Monday morning.

The Court voted to have Seibel requested to appear then, after hearing yesterday a supplemental report by the National Tax & Audit Co. of an audit of Seibel's books for the last five years of his incumbency.

Seibel told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the money had been paid over by the State after he had gone out of office and that he had decided that, as two audits of his accounts were ordered, to defer settlement until the second of these audits, to be made by the State Auditor, should show exactly how much he owed the county. His lawyer, State Senator Ralph, said that Seibel would make a settlement with the county in whatever amount the State Auditor's audit may show to be due; the lawyer referred to the audit reported on yesterday as a private one.

The report yesterday was read to the Court by Waller Edwards, secretary-treasurer of the company, and related that it had been learned that the State paid the $4030.87 to the St. Louis County Bank last May and that it was learned at the bank that $3800 of the money thus received had been kept to cancel a loan to Seibel last October and the rest credited to his account as clerk. Peter Wetzel, president of the bank, said that such a loan was not unusual, being made necessary to keep the work in the clerk's office going on. The clerk's office force is paid from fees as they come in.

A ROMAN ALTAR IS FOUND

English Children Had Used It as Jumping Stone.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Used for years as a jumping block in children's games, a large white square stone three feet high, near Kingston road, has been identified as a Roman altar, 2000 years old.

The antiquarian, Doctor W. H. Kesteven, who made the discovery, says it is like all early Roman altars, and the depression on top shows where the offerings for the gods were placed. Carved figures, supposed to represent priests, can still be seen on one side.

PRINCESS CAPTURES A DOUGHBOY'S HEART

Pennsylvania Boy Writes Letters but Queen Won't Permit Her Daughter to Reply.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 18.—Queen Marie tells a delightful story about her youngest daughter, Princess Ilyeana, in which an American doughboy living in Pennsylvania figures.

The former Yankee soldier, who had served on the western front in France, returned to his father's farm in a little town near Philadelphia, where he saw photographs of the little princess with her pet dog in the American Sunday pictorial supplements. Enamoured of her smile and girlish beauty, the doughboy wrote the princess asking her to correspond with him, and saying if she would become his girl he would "never take any other girl to the movies."

The princess, who is just past 14, replied to the Yankee soldier boy, enclosing her photograph and saying she had heard a lot about the gallantry of the American soldiers and would be delighted to hear from him again. The doughboy replied expressing his renewed admiration for Europe's prettiest princess, and a wish to see her. Ilyeana was about to acknowledge his letter when her mother, Queen Marie, discovered the correspondence and cautioned her that she must not raise false hopes in the heart of her youthful admirer. She ceased her letters regretfully, but the letters from the doughboy have continued to this day.

In relating the story the Queen took occasion to say that the frequent reports about the engagement of Ilyeana to King Boris of Bulgaria were silly fabrications, and she cited the doughboy story as illustrating the childlike simplicity of Ilyeana and her unpreparedness for marriage.

HILMER INSURANCE SETTLEMENT

$5000 to Estate From Accident Policies.

A settlement for $5000 on an accident insurance claim growing out of the death of Adolph R. Hilmer, a real estate dealer, was confirmed yesterday by Circuit Judge Mix, who rendered a judgment in favor of Hilmer's estate. The insurance company agreed to the settlement.

Hilmer fatally shot himself June 26, 1922, when in the smoking car of a Wabash passenger train between Delmar Station and Union Station. He carried two accident policies, one for $2500 and the other for $7500. It was contended his death was an accident, as he was irresponsible when he shot himself. Testimony was to the effect that he had to give up business because of frequent brooding over the death of his wife. The insurance company filed an answer stating that it had sent a notice to Hilmer's residence at 2033 East Fair avenue three days before his death notifying him that the policies had been canceled.

Nelson, said by his wife to have an income in excess of $500 a month, entered his appearance in the case, waiving service.

GUALDONI RELATES THE DRY AGENTS' TROUBLES

Dismissed Officer Does Not Think Prohibition Can Be Enforced by Methods Used.

That the Volstead act is impossible of enforcement with methods now employed by the Federal Government owing to the small number of enforcement agents as compared to the number of "bootleggers" and "moonshiners," is the opinion expressed by Louis J. Gualdoni, the oldest Federal enforcement agent in point of service in St. Louis, who was dismissed from the service yesterday by R. A. Harris, divisional chief of general prohibition agents in Missouri. Gualdoni was dismissed for insubordination, based on his refusal to accept a transfer to Minneapolis.

In an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter concerning his work of the last three years, Gualdoni said he believed illicit whisky was being sold in more places than there were saloons before adoption of the eighteenth amendment.

Besides a number of saloons that now sell whisky by stealth, Gualdoni said that other places that have been found to be engaged in violating the Volstead act, were certain drug stores, butcher shops, oil filling stations, tailor shops, barber shops and shoe polishing stands.

Where Stills Are Found.

Among the bootleggers he has found cooks, elevator operators, taxicab starters and chauffeurs, hotel bellboys, Pullman porters, newsboys, teamsters and shoe salesmen, and there is record of stills having been found on farms, in dugouts, homes, warehouses, clay mines, woods, grocery stores, importing houses and tailor shops.

"Not more than 15 enforcement agents have been in the St. Louis territory, which includes all of Eastern Missouri, at one time," Gualdoni said, "and these few men could not possibly cope with the actual violations of the Volstead act."

Gualdoni's salary was $1800 a year, plus a bonus of $240, the maximum received by enforcement agents, and he declined the Minneapolis transfer on the ground that he could not support himself there and his family in St. Louis on that income. When offered the transfer he resigned and was dismissed before his resignation became effective. He had previously declined transfers to three other cities for the same reason.

Violators Continue Operating.

In March, 1920, Gauldoni arrested Alex Fargo, a saloonkeeper at 601 South Vandeventer avenue, for violation of the Volstead act. Three days ago he again arrested Fargo on the same charge. Eighteen months ago he arrested Fargo during a raid in the process of which he says Fargo offered a bribe. Fargo was indicted in this case by the Federal grand jury and the case is still pending. He also cited numerous instances of repeated arrests of saloon owners and bartenders, some as many as 10 times, who continue operating.

The department, he said, gives the field agents very little co-operation in actual enforcement. On the other hand, he said, bootleggers and moonshiners are very cautious, and few of the largest operators are apprehended.

Saloon Property Values.

"As a matter of fact," said Gualdoni, "no real organized effort has been made to get the manufacturers and transporters who violate the law, and the Federal agents are devoting 90 per cent of their time to small sales. To stop manufacture and transportation is the only method of certain enforcement."

Gualdoni said the saloon business as a profitable venture was more attractive than before prohibition, adding that saloon properties, minus stocks and fixtures, now bring three to four times what well-stocked and equipped barrooms formerly sold for.

DETECTIVE TAKEN OFF HUNT FOR MISSING FR. VRANIAK

Priest's Brother Abandons Personal Search—Virden Parishioners to Continue Investigation.

A detective, who followed a wanderer supposed to be the missing Father John A. Vraniak of Virden, Ill., through western Missouri and eastern Kansas for two months, has been taken off the trail, it was learned at Virden yesterday.

Frank Vraniak, brother of the priest, who assisted in the search, has abandoned personal participation and has returned to Chicago. Slovak parishioners of Father Vraniak are resolved to continue the investigation, however, it was said, and are planning to run down other clews. They are being assisted by the Knights of Columbus.

REFUSES PROFESSORSHIP TO EARN $104 A WEEK AS PLASTERER

Wages Paid on Evanston Hotel Job Attract Students, Ministers and Men in Other Professions.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Plasterers' wages of $104 and more a week are causing students, ministers and members of other professions to take up the trowel in Evanston, where work on a new hotel is in progress. Until recently, the Rev. Frank Cummins was a member of the plastering gang. George Sellick of Portland, Ore., a graduate of Washington University, a civil engineer and a holder of several degrees, recently turned down the offer of a professorship to join the plasterers.

"I learned the trade in high school and worked my way through college," Sellick said. "When I graduated in 1917, I found the trade paid better than my profession as an engineer. Members of my graduating class are working for $200 a month and my pay runs between $400 and $500."

DANISH BUTTER COMPETING WITH MISSOURI FARM PRODUCT

State Marketing Commission Official Warns Farmers to Improve Grade of Output.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 18.—Unless creamery owners and butter manufacturers of Missouri improve the grade and increase the quantity of their product the industry will suffer greatly through the importation of Danish butter, Daniel C. Rogers, Associate Commissioner of the State Marketing Bureau said here today.

"The manufacture of butter from poor cream must be discontinued very soon if the flood of butter importations from Denmark is to be forced off the market," Rogers said. "Quality butter is what the Missouri consumer wants, and he is going to get it even if he has to go to Denmark for it," the marketing commissioner added.

The Danish butter is of a quality superior to our own, Rogers asserted, and explained that a number of dealers wishing to establish reputations for handling good butter were buying the Danish product, re-labeling it and selling it for a home product.

"Denmark," Rogers said, "although scarcely one-fourth the size of Missouri, can manufacture approximately 250,000,000 pounds of high-grade creamery butter a year, in addition to feeding its 3,000,000 people at home."

BEAUTY PRIZE WINNER WEDS

East St. Louis Girl and Law Student Secretly Married July 14.

The secret marriage on July 14 of Miss Edith Ray of East St. Louis, winner of a $1000 beauty prize for Illinois, two years ago, to Wendell J. Phillips, 27, a Washington University law student, became known last night.

The bride's father, W. H. Ray, is a Justice of the Peace at Rosemont. The couple will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Ray while their home is being completed. The courtship began when Phillips, a Lieutenant wounded in the World War, returned to East St. Louis. He was retired from the army last year.

Minister's Home Robbed.

Burglars at the homes of the Rev. George R. Dodson, 4401 McPherson avenue, and Dr. Andrew C. Henske, 2104A South King's highway, yesterday took clothing, jewelry and other articles valued by the owners at about $1200.

A NEW NIHILISM IS DEVELOPING IN GERMANY

With Monarchists as Its Backbone, Organzation Is Said to Be at Work.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, July 28.—Germany has developed a new nihilism. Not the violence of the radical but of the extreme right—the fanatical nationalists, the monarchist, against whom the old nihilism was directed.

Whatever the outcome of the reparations difficulties this underground movement will remain one of Germany's big political problems. If no settlement is reached, the movement has obviously more scope. In any event, it is a recognized force, feared the more because it is secret.

Nihilism is Czarist Russia sought a new society. Nihilism was directed seeks the old. But with the same methods—secret organizations, intrigue within intrigue, desperate ventures, loose thinking and loose passions.

Recently the Socialists have been demanding an exhaustive inquiry into the new nihilism. From time to time newspapers discover new traces of it. Minister of Interiar Severing, commonly rumored a marked victim of the nihilists, is directing a thoroughgoing police search throughout Prussia.

Higher-Ups Said to Be Involved.

Dark hints are scattered that men close to the top of Imperial Germany are behind the movement; that the investigation will disclose internationally known personalities. Thus far only the minor agents have been disclosed.

At the moment Lieut. von Rossbach is presented as the brains of the movement. He is now in jail, following discovery of plans for a monarchist revolt.

Rossbach was an officer in the Kaiser's army, decorated for conspicuous gallantry. After the armistice he organized the Free Corps. He is primarily an adventurer. His army fought the bolsheviki in the Baltic, the Poles in Upper Silesia, the communists in Germany.

When the German Government demanded the dissolution of the Free Corps as a menace to the republic, Rossbach ignored the order. He disguised his regiments by calling them sport or culture clubs. He amassed all the arms and munitions he could lay hands upon and hid them in convenient storerooms throughout the country. He maintained an efficient courier system and spent most of his time traveling from city to city, perfecting his organization.

Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ, charges that even from his cell Rossbach is still directing this outlawed army. Whether or not this is so, certainly the framework of the Free Corps has not yet been destroyed.

Waiting for "Der Tag."

The French invasion of the Ruhr gave the movement new impetus. Revolutions are complex affairs. Sabotage is simpler. The Ruhr occupation produced a tremendous wave of nationalism—and the Nihilists are intense nationalists. They directed and are directing their activities against the French for the time being, meanwhile waiting for Der Tag, when they can install a military dictatorship to supplant the republic.

Apparently the movement is not closely knit. There are central organizations, but nothing of the discipline, say, of the communists in Russia, or the Fascisti in Italy, when these two rode into power. Its activities are varied—dynamiting of French trains in the Ruhr, the shooting of French sentries—then dynamiting of communist or socialist newspapers—assassinations of republican leaders, of whom Walter Rathenau was the latest victim.

HAY DRYING BY ELECTRIC FAN PROVES SUCCESS IN ENGLAND

Feeding Value of Crop Increased by New Methodist, It Is Asserted.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Hay is now being grown in many parts of England by methods over which the weather clerk has no control.

In these advanced sections, the grass is gathered, perhaps in a damp state, as soon as cut and crammed into a rick in the stack yard.

An electric fan does the rest.

When the rick is built a metal cylinder is inserted so that an air cavity is formed. This cavity will service a 30-ton rick to insure the safety of the curing and cooling process. A fan placed in the cavity dries out the grass and keeps it from rotting.

It is claimed that not only are the farmers saved the possible loss of their crops through bad weather, but analysis shows that hay dried in the rick has a higher percentage of albuminoids and carbo-hydrates, and therefore increased feeding value.

The new method has been tried and approved by the Ministry of Agriculture and the ricks are appearing in all sections of England and Scotland.

DROUGHT CONDITIONS IN U. S. CAUSE ALARM AMONG FEDERAL FARM OFFICIALS

Corn and Wheat Crop of This Country and Canada Theatened—Abnormal Weather Reported All Over World.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Following a late spring, the summer which has been intensely hot throughout the country, has brought a drought which is alarming the Department of Agriculture. The freakish weather conditions here have been duplicated in Europe, South America and Africa, indicating a planetary rather than a local condition.

The drought on this continent is threatening the corn and wheat crop of this country and Canada, wheat production in the latter country already being reported 17,000,000 bushels short of the expected yield. Frost may affect the Canadian wheat crop, reducing Canadian production materially and possibly resulting in increased prices for the American wheat producer.

Weather of World Not Normal.

A tabulation of rainfall since May 1 shows New England received only about 80 per cent of normal; New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, less than 70 per cent; and Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the Ohio Valley about 65 per cent, while the eastern Gulf States received considerably more than their normal supply.

While drought conditions have been general, cloudbursts of record intensity have occurred in nearly every state except in the extreme Southwest. Although in many cases the rainfall has been the greatest on record, owing to the intensity of the rain and the dryness of the soil the water has run off quickly and has damaged rather than helped crops.

Similar conditions have prevailed in other parts of the world. Both Africa and South America have reported unusual floods and winters of unparalleled severity. Winter temperatures in the Argentine wheat areas have averaged six degrees below normal. Western Europe, which recorded black frosts and snow storms as late as the last week in spring, since July 1 has had a series of heat waves which have broken all records.

Sahara Winds Scorch Europe.

The weather of Western Europe is determined during the summer largely by the permanent "high" between the Azores and the Mediterranean. For more than two months, this "high" has centered between the Azores and the South Atlantic coast of the United States. In consequence, hot winds from the Sahara desert have blown across Western Europe, causing temperatures frequently to rise above 100 degrees.

The Aleutian "low," which is accepted as a cause of the "lows" which cross America, has shown a marked tendency to return to a strength not generally looked for before the middle of September. This presages a series of deep "lows," followed by cold waves from the far North, which, according to some meteorologists, threaten frosts in the Western Canadian provinces in the next three weeks that may overtake the Canadian spring wheat crops before it is ripened, thereby reducing the crop by 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels.

Rains Abnormal in U. S.

Two weeks ago, Calgary, Can., was visited by a snowstorm, accompanied by temperatures as low as 29 degrees. The sun has worked south from its northern excursion more than half way to the equator, and, in consequence of the extremely late spring and the long delayed melting of the northern Canadian snows, the accumulated heat of the Arctic summer is already dissipated and an early and pronounced fall is regarded as imminent.

The abnormal conditions still exist. For two months hardly a point in the United States has had a rain of the continuous type lasting 24 to 48 hours. Instead, there has been a series of thunderstorms and cloudbursts extending through the Mississippi Valley, from the 100th meridian east to the Atlantic.

The South Atlantic and Eastern Gulf States have had so many thunderstorms as seriously to affect the corn crops. Texas and Oklahoma, which have been relied upon to produce not less than 35 per cent of this year's production of cotton, are seriously menaced by drought and hot winds.

Indications are that the drought-stricken area will extend northward until it involves a considerable portion of the corn belt and may materially reduce estimates of the corn crop.

In New York State, the peach crop, injured in the spring by continued cold weather, now indicates les sthan 50 per cent normal production. In view of weather conditions, scientists in all Government departments are concentrating their attention anew on the discovery announced before the National Academy of Science by Dr. Abbott of the Smithsonian Institution. As a result of his experiments he discovered that the heat of the sun reaching the earth shows the greatest decline of which there is any scientific record. Dr. Abbot said in his report to the academy that profound weather departures from normal conditions might be expected.

In a hearing before the Senate Committee on Agriculture Feb. 6, Herbert I. Browne, a Washington statistician and meteorologist, predicted that this year would see the beginning of abnormal weather conditions, which would continue to a grand climacteric of weather abnormalities and in America would take the form of a nation-wide drouth, or a repetition of that extraordinary year, 1816, "the year without summer." He said the probabilities were that the freakish weather would continue until 1926-27.

A TRUE RAT STORY

Auburntown, Tenn., 6-22-23.
Stearns Electric Paste Co., Chicago.

Dear Sirs: Mr. Robert T. Donnell of Auburntown, Tenn., came in our store the other day and wanted something to kill rats, so I sold him a box Stearns Rat Paste. And he put some paste on six biscuits that night and the next morning he found fifty-four big rats. And the second night he put out four more biscuits with paste on them, and the second morning he found seventeen more rats, making a total of seventy-one rats in two nights, and there were lots more that he did not find.

This is some big rat tale, but, nevertheless, it is so. Just thought would write to let you know that your rat paste is good.

Respectfully, KENNEDY BROTHERS.

"Suspended Judgments," by John Cowper Powys, Is a Study of Leaders in the World's Literature, Written With a Passion and a Prejudice That Constitute a Disservice—"The Unveiled Ladies of Stamboul" Is a Graphic Picture of the Reign of the New Woman Idea in the Capitol of the Prophet.

"SUSPENDED JUDGMENTS," by John Cowper Powys. (American Library Service.)

WHEN a man passes judgment on a book of logic or pure mathematics, he makes use of his intellect only. He may have a poor, pitiful, thin, or even morbid personality, without the fact being apparent in his logical judgments. But when it is a question of the good, the beautiful, the humanly excellent, of what we call today value judgments, what expresses itself in these judgments is not the intellect only but the whole nature of the man. It was for this reason that Aristotle said that to deal with ethical questions successfully one must have received a good moral education.

We have here a collection of essays of "suspended judgments" (in which there is nothing suspended) on sixteen writers, among them Montaigne, Pascal, Voltaire, Rousseau, Balzac, Hugo, de Maupassant, Verlaine, Remy de Gourmont and Oscar Wilde. The author's feelings are intense. He constantly breaks out in expressions of bitter hatred and contempt for men and women who are building civilization today. This is a sample: "This thrice accursed weight of Protestant Puritanism, the most odious and inhuman of all the perverted superstitions that have darkened man's history." He is in revolt, in the accusative case. When he says of Rousseau that "temperamentally considered, he is one of the most passionately anarchical minds in the history of the race," he is describing a kindred spirit. His objection to Nietzsche is that he is too ascetic, too severe.

Mr. Powys' conception of literature is concisely expressed in these words: "The moralist is debarred from any free and passionate love of literature by the simple fact that all literature is created out of the vices of men of letters." A responsible thinker, with principles, scruples and a disciplined mind, is incapacitated for literary criticism. "There is indeed required," he says, "a certain fundamental irresponsibility, if we are to become clairvoyant critics of life." His ideal literary man seems to be Remy de Gourmont. To read a few pages of this Frenchman is to be "conscious that one has entered again the large, spacious, free, irresponsible, heathen atmosphere of the great writers of antiquity." He is the opposite of everything most characteristic of our "Puritan-souled and commercial-minded Democracy," a frank and unmitigated hedonist, who declares pleasure to be the highest end of man on this earth.

Read de Gourmont, and you have the emotion art produces, you go "from metaphysics to sensuality and from the pure idea to physical pleasure." His motto is, "Do as you please." "Like all the profoundest intelligenuces of the race, he is a spiritual anarchist." There you have it without apology. Be a physical, mental and moral tramp, throw off all discipline, despiritualize life, discard the discipline that makes us civilized, only express your spirit in poems, essays and plays, and you have—literature.

If anyone thinks this severe and possibly unjust, let him read the book, and if he has not time for the whole, let him study the "suspended judgment" on Remy de Gourmont. Of this literary master, he says, "For this shameless advocate of pleasure as the legitimate aim of the human race, sex and everything connected with sex comes naturally to be of paramount interest, Remy de Gourmont would have sex and sex-emotions put frankly into the foreground of everything, as far as art and letters are concerned." This "intellectual artist, free from every scruple * * * would paganize, Latinize and Mediterraneanize the genius of Europe."

Simple and admirable. Let us return to instinct. The discipline of morality and religion is intolerable. Literature is produced only by great spiritual anarchists. Constructive, responsible, disciplined minds cannot write. Literature will have a disintegrating effect on young minds, then? Of course. But they must be kept out of the way. If sensuality is our highest good, art must not hesitate to say so.

It is astonishing that people will pay for books of this kind or that they will attend, as they seem to do, the author's popular lectures. Possibly the explanation is that there are many people who seek sensations, and from this book they will receive the desired thrills. ut Mr. Powys is rendering a profound disservice to literature. And the reader must surely sometimes pause to realize that though these "suspended judgments" and ideals are interesting when expressed in the writer's vigorous phrase, their logical expression in life would be a very different matter.

G. R. DODSON.

"MARK GRAY'S HERITAGE." By Eliot H. Robinson.

MARK GRAY supposed himself of undiluted Quaker stock. He could not understand his proneness to violence, contrary to the tenets of the Friends' faith, and it caused distress to him and brought upon him the condemnation of the congregation of Content, the Pennsylvania village in which his lot was cast.

The revelation of his heritage, which explained everything, had to be made when his inexplicable nature got him into deep difficulty. The disclosure was made by the man he called father, the only father that he had ever known. As an explanation it very well serves fiction's ends, whether or not one accepts its scientific sufficiency.

Then there was Sister Faith, who had no adverse heritage to overcome and could devote herself fully to helping Mark Gray triumph over the propensities of his nature.

It is a pleasing story, with the peace of the voliage of Content resting like a benediction. If the speech of the simple villagers is more perfect than it should be, the explanation is that its forms encourage a writer's most chaste endeavor.

"THE UNVEILED LADIES OF STAMBOUL." (Houghton, Mifflin Co.)

THE title of this book, if one has in mind the Seven Veils, promises great entertainment, especially as a few of us will know one thing about Stamboul. But if there is disappointment in the small amount of veiling removed, there is practical information about a nation which yesterday seemed prostrate, but today rises in the full tide of its strength to become the pivot on which swings the destiny of Europe and Asia. Turkey under Mustafa Kemal decisively defeated the Greeks, twice called Lord Curzon's bluff, deposed the Sultan, and has a national assembly at Angora. The Unveiled ladies are the mancipated (?) women of this new Turkey who as sign of their freedom, have dropped the custom of veiling their faces. Violently drawn out of their former lives by the World War, their adaptation to new conditions will be a determining factor in the course the New Turkey will follow.

Demetra Vaka (Mrs. Kenneth Brown), author of several books dealing with Turkey, is especially qualified to write of Turkish life and thought. She is a Greek, who was born in Constaninople and spent her early life there. We should suppose that a Greek would be the natural enemy of the Turks, the author not only speaks of sympathy between the two races, paradoxical and subtle, but also brings out in her meetings with Turkish women the complete understanding between them.

Mrs. Brown presents various aspects of this new spirit. Outward life has changed, but the process of thought is practically the same. The Turks hate passionately that which is Christian. Westerners are largely to blame for this, for Turkey has been the pawn in the European diplomatic game. She dreams always of conquest and therein lies our condemnation; her acquisitive spirit never conduces to civilization; she is a parasite living on the civilization of conquered subjects. The Kemalists dream of and plan for an Asia organized to stand against Europe. There is love of the ideal, but the ideal is narrowly racial, and more sensuous than spiritual.

Mrs. Brown proposes a settlement of the question of Constantinople and the Turk in Europe. Her plan disregards the Great Powers and deals only with the Greeks with whom are Turkey's main difficulties. It is to trade Constantinople for Smyrna, the Greeks to evacuate all of Asia Minor, keeping instead Thrace and Constantinople. They are to pay a fixed tribute for 50 years, which money the Turks can employ to build schools all over Asia Minor. They are to exchange populations whenever it is possible. However, today the Greeks have been driven out of Smyrna and Turkey holds undisputed possession of the land given over to Greece.

Today Constantinople is occupied by English, French, Italians and Americans. France supplied arms and ammunition to Turkey to bring about the defeat of England's protegee, Greece. Italy also joined France to prevent further extension of English power. English and American business interests clash. It is an atmosphere of hatred in the midst of a people again risen in power, with a hatred far surpassing that of the West, determined in its triumphant return to massacre every Christian. We cry out. But we have set the example and talk about morality with the other side of the picture carefully turned out of sight. Our morality is practical. We seek "concessions." Thousands of Christians will die for those "concessions," while the negotiators will thunder out platitudes against these Eastern barbarians.

J. EDWARD HUSSEY.

MAN AND MAID. by Elinor Glyn. (J. B. Lippincott Co.)

THE train butcher, enlivening a dull hour by reading his own wares, will be attracted to this book by the tent-show lettering of its jacket, and will peruse it with a yawn at some points and an ejaculatory "Gee!" at others. If he thinks enough of it to lend it to the waitress at the station lunch counter, her verdict may be something like this:

"Some couple! Him with one eye out and one leg gone, and her with a living-skeleton shape and googly eyes that she wouldn't let him look at. She musta been a scream, with them yellow cheaters on. Say, but she worked him proper! Stenogged for him, and wouldn't stand for any chatter—nothing but dictation. He couldn't even ask her if the machine needed a new ribbon, without her huffing up and telling him to stick to business.

"He thought it was that skirt that kept hanging round, working him for checks, that made this stenog of his sore. But say, boy, she knew that was all off. She figured that all the other janes fell for him at sight, and that the longer she stood him off, the surer he would be to make it wedding bells. And even after she had him hooked up, she did the wife-in-name-only till he gets the new glass eye. Then comes the clinch and the fadeout. Did he have money? Say, what would Elinor Glyn be writing about a poor guy for? Here, take the book back, Joe. It'll do to sell some dame that hasta stop over at Monett a coupla hours on her way to Wichita. Whatcha say, conductor? Yes, we have no grapefruit."

"DAMAGED SOULS," by Gamaliel Bradford. (Houghton, Mifflin Co.)

A PUBLISHING house having proposed to the author that he produce a series of "iconoclastic portraits," he replied that the suggestion made a fascinating appeal to the worst side of his nature, yet he refused. The work of destruction seemed to him not worth doing, besides there are many who are engaged in the task of destroying great reptuations, and showing that there are no real heroes or heroines, nobody who is great or good.

He therefore made the counter proposition to do a group of discredited figures, not with the purpose of whitewashing them, but of bringing out their real humanity, and giving them credit for whatever goodness their mixed characters possessed. Why, indeed, should we wish to believe anybody wholly bad? The result is a collection of psychological portraits of John Brown, Thomas Paine, Aaron Burr, Benedict Arnold, Benj. F. Butler, P. T. Barnum and John Randolph. The work is well done, the essays being among the best and most interesting things the author has written. Of the group, the hardest characters to understand are those of Burr and Randolph. Much of what is said of Burr would be incredible, if it were not based on Burr's Private Journal, edited by W. K. Bixby. What remains incomprehensible is the adoration of Burr's noble daughter for a father who frankly reported to her in detail his dissipations and disreputable adventures in Bohemia.

Best of all and abounding in psychological insight is the essay on Thomas Paine. There are men whose reputations get started upward in the lifetime and long continue to ascend. Others are, so to speak, idealized downward, until they become veritable symbols of evil. But given time enough, even bitter hatred dies, and it becomes possible to see men as they were. Paine is really a transparent character. An English mechanic, with little education, the very incarnation of the spirit of revolt, with a mastery of words and a power of expression seldom surpassed in history, with a deep love of liberty, a passionate faith in human nature, an anticipator of many great reforms, yet without a trace of reverence in his nature, he found and used a great opportunity and rendered distinguished service to America, yet by his writings on religion he stirred up the "odium theologicum," one of the most virulent passions of our nature. He has therefore been covered with obloquy, and his name coupled with that of Satan, for we have all heard of "the devil and Tom Paine." Mr. Bradford does not explain away, or apologize for, Paine's faults, but he shows how they have been exaggerated. Like many another lonely old man, he was careless about his personal appearance, yet when a man has upset the world it is childish to complain that he did not brush his clothes.

A wide reading of these esays will not help Paine or the other damaged souls. But it will help us. It may make us ashamed to run with the pack and join in the hue and cry against men whom we dislike but of whom we know little. And surely the command not to bear false witness should be observed as scrupulously in the case of reputations already sadly damaged as when those of our neighbors are involved.

"MY THIRTY YEARS IN BASEBALL," by John J. McGraw. (Boni and Liveright.)

THERE is no more outstanding figure in the baseball world than "Muggsy" McGraw, certainly there has been none in the past 30 years to attract more attention and no one who has been more in the mind of the public than the manager of the New York Giants. George M. Cohan's instroduction describes Johnny as being universally hated and loved. That certainly states the case. He has been hated for his methods of building a club, for the unbridled use of money in acquiring players with which to win championships, and for the rowdy methods which characterized the play of his men on the field at least up to the last few years.

But there is another side to the "Little Napoleon." A strain of sentiment runs through his nature and is given expression in the excellent care he has taken of old ball players and his early associates. McGraw has always been able and willing to find something for men to do after they found it difficult to obtain situations. Amos Rusie, Arthur Devlin, Jesse Burkett, "Cozy" Dolan, and many others have found work with McGraw after their playing days were over. Not that these men were objects of charity. The Giants could use their brains, were glad to get the benefit of their experience, and in return gave them adequate compensation.

All these things are told in the first person, which has the usual effect of becoming tiresome with the constant repetition of the personal pronoun. However, it is a spicy story of the most turbulent years of baseball history and contains much that is interesting and amusing.

"IMPRESSIONS OF AN AVERAGE JURYMAN," by Robert Stewart Sutliffe. (Herbert H. Foster, New York.)

RESTRICT the exemption lists, make the juryman's job one of dignity, make him comfortable, and keep him busy, or let him go to his place of business when he is not working, and a much higher grade of jury work will result."

Thus does Mr. Sutliffe summarize the sensible, constructive suggestions which form a goodly portion of this book sandwiched in between many amusing anecdotes of the courts. The book reads well. It was not written by a lawyer. The author has been serving as a juror in New York for 18 years and he tells what he thinks of the present system, and why. For once, the helpless and bedeviled juryman has a chance to tell just how he and his fellows regard the law's delays and their views about certain well-known types of Judges, court clerks, lawyers, witnesses and fellow jurors.

The author explains in a foreword why he write the book. Of course, partly, there was the hope of improving the conditions under which jury duty is now performed. But for many years it had seemed to the author that a picture of the average juryman, showing his weak points and his strong ones, his likes and dislikes, would be valuable material for lawyers. Men in a jury box, and the same men locked into a small, stuffy room where they must try to agree upon a verdict, have different personalities. It is possible that many a lawyer who has listened to the verdict with speechless indignation will understand that verdict after he has read this book and pondered some of the truths set forth by the veteran juror who wrote it.

Mr. Sutliffe declares that juries, on the whole, bring in fair verdicts and that they weigh evidence in an intelligent way. He says it is true that many juries do not measure up to the average intelligence of all of the people. This is not the fault of the multitude, but of the better-educated and better-fitted class who are unwilling to make the sacrifices involved in this great and necessary civic duty, and obtain exemption—in many instances through unholy methods."

It is perhaps too much to hope that jury duty ever can be made an attractive job. But this book points out how certain of the most aggravating features in the present system could be ameliorated, and it is entertaining, besides.

Digests, Abstracts, Briefs, Etc.

"Self Healing Through Autosuggestion," by C. F. Winbigler. (American Library Service.)

More of the same balderdash. This author adds to Coue-Coueism forms of treatment for certain typical acses of insomnia, constipation, sick headache, and other afflictions; the "treatment" consisting in every case of nauseating repetition of three silly sentences, of which each must be either whispered, or forcefully whispered, or shouted, or "move-lipped" a definite number of times. It would make one impossible in hotel or Pullman car. There are also recipes for success in any sphere of activity. Quousque tandem?

"The Flight." By Muriel Hine, (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

The romance of Clodagh Laidlow and Sir Ian Strangeway started in a unique and charming manner, and after marriage seemed to hold all the elements of success. Strangeway's wife soon finds, however, that he is not up to her standards. She carries on loyally for a while, finally, detecting him in an intrigue, she goes abroad.

She finds a peaceful refuge on the small island of Siris in the Mediterranean where she makes two loyal friends—self-exiled Englishmen. In her new surroundings she grows to be a calm, self-reliant woman, and when she finally is forced to return home she goes with confidence in herself.

Well written, holds the attention throughout.

"Sandy Oorang." By Horace Lytle. (R. F. Fenno & Co.)

This, the life story of an Airedale terrier, is by far the best animal story from the pen of Horace Lytle.

From puppyhood to old dog's age the life of Sandy Oorang is filled by many humans.

There is not a dull moment in his entire career. Born on a farm, he passes to a cultured home because of the part he plays in saving the daughter of a rich man. He spends an unforgettable winter in the Canadian wilds, is stolen, enters the World War with a regiment of Canadian and wins a Croix de Guerre under most thrilling circumstances. As a fitting climax he saves his lost master from a wrecked plane. A reunion follows and he returns to his old home to enjoy the companionship of his master and mistress for the remainder of his days.

"Out of the Silent North," by Harry Sinclair Drago. (The Macauley Co.)

A robust, unlagging story of the Far North that bounds along with the vitality of youth, love, and courage.

"The Stumbling Herd," by John A. Moroso. (The Macauley Co.)

Life is still dramatic below Fourteenth street. The old prejudices, the political intrigues, and the clash of races provide an ever changing background of danger and excitement for this story.

"The Desert Horizon," by E. L. Grant Watson. (Alfred A. Knopf.)

Author's Postscript: "If when turning the last page the reader complains that this is but the beginning of a story, I will admit so obvious a truth, and will only say in my defense that I deal with human history—which is continuous. What I have shown is a phase. With each phase of life there is a separate metamorphosis of the spirit; with every fundamental experience the state of the soul changes."

In Mr. Watson's story the question is, what happens to a sturdy lad brought up in the rough school of the bush, pushed into life at the age of twelve? It is convincingly answered.

"Sinbad," by C. Kay Scott. (Thomas Seltzer.)

It will be remembered that Mr. Scott's earlier novel, "Blind Mice," was hailed by the critics as a masterpiece of realism. "Sinbad" is an ironic romance of New York pseudo-intellectuals. Mr. Scott knows his characters intimately, down to their subtlest motives. And he knows their background; the garish, hectic life of artistic New York.

"The Scudders," by Irving Batcheller. (The Macmillan Co.)

In this story of today Mr. Batcheller has given a telling satire of the follies of fashionable life, with its fads and excesses. The treatment is kindly but keen, in the manner of a social sermon full of clever hits at ultra-modern points of view.

"The Tree of the Garden," by Edward C. Booth. (D. Appleton and Co.)

The love-story of Thursday Hardrip and Guy Openshaw is a piece of poetic realism that has astonished and enthused English reviewers. Mr. Booth is, without question, one of the leading writers of this time, and in the estimate of more than one critical authority nothing so good as "The Tree of the Garden" has been done since Hardy wrote "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

"Country Club People," by Margaret Culkin Banning. (George H. Doran Co.)

The author inscribes her picture of our American social life in a middle western city to those readers to whom a novel is not a channel for propaganda nor an album of photographs but a fragment of human history.

"The Really Romantic Age," by L. Allen Harker. (Charles Schribner's Sons.)

What is really the romantic age? The young people are all so practical. Yet the controlling romantic force in this story is "Little Joe," who is a baby for a good part of the book.

"The Escapade of Roger Drew," by Frank Dilnot. (The Stratford Co.)

The story of a whimsical adventurer in business, shown in love, and in a desperate fight against circumstances.

"Through the Wheat," by Thomas Boyd. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Veterans of Belleau Wood and the Argonne who have read this novel declare that it is a true presentation of American experiences in the war. The author was an enlisted man in the Marines and knows what he writes about. He presents the A. E. F. not as composed of incredibly heroic heroes, nor of embittered victims of a capitalistic society, but of vigorous, resilient American youths, playing the game they have undertaken to play.

"The Barge of Haunted Lives," by J. Aubrey Tyson. (The Macmillan Co.)

This new book from the author of "The Scarlet Tanager" deals with even stranger incidents and more exciting complications.

"The Jewel of Seven Stars," by Bram Stoker. (Harper & Brothers.)

The story opens with a great English Egyptologist strangely wounded in his room. Mystery after mystery develops. Bram Stoker is, once more, "at his hair raising best."

"Sowing and Reaping," by W. Burns McGregor. (Peter G. Boyle, 267 W. Seventeenth street, New York.)

A fair story with a redundant lesson and a happy ending.

"The Rose of Santa Fe," by Edwin L. Sabin. (George W. Jacobs & Co.)

A story of the days when caravans set out on the Southwest trail from Independence, the last frontier town in extreme Western Missouri, to cross the plain and the desert, their goal the ancient Spanish settlement of Santa Fe.

"Four of a Kind," by J. P. Marquand. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Four stories, namely; The love story of a fighter; a story of horses and the old-school sportsman; a satire of the modern young girl; and a tale of love and advertising.

"Desolate Splendour," by Michael Sadleir. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

A dramatic narrative of passion nd self-sacrifice, of covetous old age of lechery, of careless indolence.

"Cables of Cobweb," by Paul Jordan-Smith. (Lieber & Lewis.)

The author guides the hero through episodes that mirror faithfully our own radical, Bohemian youth to which most of us turn traitors by accepting in our own age the philosophy of our fathers.

"Walter Tiverton," by Bernard Marshall. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Walter of Tiverton and Boris Delmar were young in the age for which Sir Walter Scott first whetted the world's appetite. This is, therefore, a story of battles and escapes, outlawry and prowess, disguises and discoveries.

"BY CAMEL AND CAR TO THE PEACOCK THRONE," by E. Alexander Powell. (The Century Co.)

THIS is the narrative of an adventurous journey across Hither Asia from the Mediterranean to the Caspian.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

B. V.—Erin is an ancient name which is now employed poetically for Ireland.

T. M. B.—The poem, "The Face on the Floor," was written by H. A. D'Arcy. It can be read at the Public Library.

UNLUCKY VET.—Apply to the rehabilitation section of the Veterans' Bureau, 6801 Delmar, for the information you desire.

L. C. F.—All replies to the Edward Bok peace plan should be addressed to the American Peace Award, 342 Madison avenue, New York, N. Y.

GRANITE.—Ugly spots which frequently show themselves on nickel-plated objects, may be easily removed with a mixture of 1 part of sulphuric acid, 50 parts alcohol. Coat the spots with this solution, wipe off after a few seconds, rinse off thoroughly with clean water, and rub dry with sawdust. Articles of polished copper and brass become tarnished very quickly. To restore their brilliancy dip a brush in strong vinegar and brush the objects to be cleaned. Next pass through water, and dry in sawdust. A soap water in which some carbonate of soda has been dissolved, will do the same service.

READER OF P.-D.—The wild red cherry is a tree from 20 to 30 feet high, common in the rocky woods, particularly in the Northern States, with leaves oblong-lanceolated, pointed, finely and sharply serrate, green, and smooth on both sides. The flowers cluster on long pedicels in May; the fruit is round, light red and very small with a thin pulp, and the stone is globular. The wild black cherry is a fine tree with gray, sometimes rather shaggy bark on the trunk, and reddish limbs. It often grows in the Western States to 80 feet in height, and 2 feet or more in diameter. The fruit is a purplish black, about the size of a common pea, but often larger on rich alluvial soils. When it is very large and ripe, it is agreeable to the taste. The dark colored timber of the tree is highly valued for cabinet wood. The common chokecherry is a tall, rather slender, shrub, from 8 to 15 feet high, with grayish bark. The fruit is red, turning to a dark crimson and very astringent to the taste until very ripe.

H. A.—The site of the White House was selected by President Washington and Maj. Peter L'Enfant when they laid out Washington in 1791. The architect was James Hoban and the plans for it were chosen by competition. The corner stone was laid Oct. 13, 1792. President and Mrs. John Adams were its first occupants, in November, 1800. It was burned by the British in 1814, and Mr. Hoban superintended the restoration. On April 24, 1800, the first White House appropriation from the U. S. Treasury was made; this was $15,000 for furniture. The system of heating and ventilation was installed in 1854. A thorough overhauling and restoration was made during the incumbency of President Roosevelt, June 20 to September 29, 1902. Congress appropriated in all, $475,445. The principal apartments in the White House are officially designated as follows: The East Room, Red Room, Blue Room, Green Room, State Dining Room, Family Dining Room and Usher's Lobby. There are a Family Floor, a main stairway and a private staircase and elevators. The dimensions of the White House in 1840 were, length or frontage, 170 feet; depth or width, 86 feet. The mansion was built of gray limestone, which was painted white after the fire, hence the name "White House." Architect Hoban had modeled the structure after the palace of the Duke of Leinster. The original cost was defrayed out of the sale of lands donated by Maryland and Virginia. The President's Office Building is located at the west of the White House. The building contains the President's Room, the Cabinet Room, a room for the President's secretary, a telegraph room, a pressroom and rooms for the clerical force.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

H. LAKE.—A child at birth no doubt has sight, but it is not certain when the appreciation of sight occurs.

SENSIBLE.—We do not know the preparation, but we believe that all these applications to the skin inadvisable.

PEP.—The hair will grow out again after bobbing but whether it will attain its former length, or longer, or how long a time will be necessary for such growth, we cannot tell.

M. A. S.—Neuritis generally is caused from some pus absorption, although anything which causes nerve irritation may be a cause. High blood pressure indicates some organic or functional disorder of the system.

WARTS.—In curing warts, first try touching the wart with oil of cinnamon. If this is not successful, place a crystal or two of trichlor acetic acid on the bottom of an inverted glass; then add a drop or two of water, and touch the wart with a wooden toothpick, dipped in this, every few days. Protect the surrounding skin from this solution and use sparingly as it is very caustic.

G. S. D.—Whether or not piles can be cured without an operation depends upon the condition present. The following may be tried: Equal parts washed sulphur, cream of tartar, and pulv. white sugar. Of this mixture take one to two teaspoonfuls before breakfast, stirred up in a glass of water. If this does not rectify the condition, an operation will perhaps be necessary.

HAIRY FACE.—(1) If you have hair removed from the face with an electric needle, it will not make the face sore, if it is skillfully done. The pain in removing it is quite insignificant. (2) They do not usually remove it all at one time, unless the number of hairs is very few. (3) Any dermatologist should do this work. The cost depends upon the operator.

F. A. C.—A negative Wassermann after four salversans is possible, but we advise that you do not stop with this, if in connection with the purpose of making the Wassermann, there were any clinical manifestations as was probably the case. Follow along over a period of two years with a course of mercury and iodide of potash, checking up from time to time with a Wassermann.

FIRM TONE SHOWN AT WEEK-END ON STOCK EXCHANGE

Trade Is of Good Volume—Bonds Are Dull—Exchange Market Quiet—Cotton Sells Lower.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"More cheerful sentiment was in evidence during today's short session, engendered doubtless by signs indicating fair industrial activity during the autumn and the steady advance in the market itself during the past four days. At the same time the volume of trading was noticeably in excess of that of recent summer Saturdays. Following a firm opening some profit taking appeared in those speculative issues which have enjoyed the most pronounced rise of late, but this was readily absorbed and the firmness of the list on the whole suggested that something in addition to short covering was a market factor. A certain amount of new buying was undoubtedly there. Bonds meanwhile were dull but held their ground.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet with little business transacted in any of the usually active currencies except sterling. The quotation for sterling, however, continued to give ground moderately, although there were no special developments. A fair amount of commercial bills were in the market. Selling at $4.55¾ the price was ⅛ lower. French francs were steady around 5.51¾ cents. Practically no attention was paid to the German mark. Spanish pesetas continued flat.

"Overnight reports of rains in certain parts of Texas and threatening weather for the week end, partially breaking a long drouth, resulted in a rush to sell cotton, mostly for profit taking, and the active futures sagged about 50 points. The market, although firm throughout the week, has been nervously watching the weather reports and the rather sharp reaction was not unexpected. Publication of the Census Bureau's figures on cotton consumption during July was without effect on the market. Consumption of 461,575 bales shows a falling off of 80,591 from the previous month, which was practically the same as the decrease between May and June. The figures were about 20,000 bales in excess of the minimum estimates of private observers, but were practically identical with more conservative opinion.

"Without any particular news affecting the trading wheat was quiet and steady. Liverpool markets were rather cheerful and a moderate amount of export inquiry developed. Under these circumstances September contracts kept within a fractional distance of yesterday's closing price of 99 7-8 cents.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House discloses a decrease in excess reserve of nearly $8,000,000. Loans and discounts decreased $76,-358,000 and demand deposits fell $53,-535,000. These changes merely reflect the continuation of the late summer business inactivity.

LOWER RANGE TO PRICE OF COTTON AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The cotton market was nervous and unsettled during today's early trading, owing to private reports of showers in Texas and the uncertainty of weather conditions over Sunday. The opening was easy at a decline of 24 to 39 points and active months sold about 30 to 40 points net lower during the early trading, with October easing off to 24c and December to 23.92c. There was a good deal of scattering liquidation and rather more Southern selling, but a considerable demand developed around the 24-cent level and fluctuations were irregular. Memphis firm estimates the crop as of Aug. 10 at 10,544,000 bales, excluding linters. Buying on the early decline was encouraged by this estimate and reports of a gradually increasing demand for cotton goods.

The Western belt forecast for clear weather over Sunday caused rallies during the middle of the morning. October sold up from 23.91c to 24.20c, but met renewed liquidation at the advance and closed at 24.01c. The general market closed barely steady at a net decline of 4 points on August and 23 to 29 points on other months.

WHEAT FUTURES CLOSE LOWER AFTER AN EARLY UPTURN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—There was not a great deal of interest exhibited in the wheat market today. Prices started higher on short covering because of the strength in Liverpool cables but as soon as the buying was over prices eased, halting for a time around the previous closing level and then easing further in the last hour on selling attributed to local longs. There was little in the news of the day to excite the trade. The International Institute of Agriculture said the increase in European wheat yields are offset by the reduction in the potato crop. The Canadian shipping situation it was said is expected to be solved by shipping 50,-000,000 bushels all rail to Duluth and then loading it into American bottoms for shipment east. Cash wheat premiums were unchanged. Shipping demand was good. Export demand was disappointing in view of the higher cables. Local shippers sold 250,000 bushels of wheat to exporters. Market closed ⅛@⅜c lower. September 99⅛@¼; December 30⅛; May 41½.

Corn was firm. There was good demand for September and the nearby months held well. Deferred futures were influenced by the action of the wheat market. Cash corn premiums were unchanged. Shipping demand was good. Receipts were smaller. Market closed ⅛@⅜c higher. September 79⅝@¾; December 63½@⅝; May 65⅛@¼.

Oats were easier. Feature was the buying of September by cash houses early. Local selling caused the late reaction. Market closed ⅛@⅜c lower. September 37⅛; December 39⅜; May 47⅞.

Trade in provisions was confined to lard. Prices were a shade firmer on scattered buying. Lard closed unchanged to 7½ higher.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 18.—Wheat closed slightly easier, with corn hardly changed, at the week-end session. Favorable weather for threshing in the Central West was reported, and with export demand slow, excited bearish influence on the market.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Increased optimism was noted in the cotton cloth market today. Individual orders were bigger than earlier in the week. Print cloths and sheetings were in most demand, the former being quoted at 9 cents for the 64x60s and 10⅛ cents for the 68x72s. There was less interest in more sheets and drills.

There was also better feeling in the Oriental raw silk market. Yokohama reported a firmer market, with 1200 bales sold. Quotations here were unchanged from yesterday, reading: XXA 13-15 and 20-22, $7.70; XXB, $7.60; extra, $7.35; best No. 1 X, $7.25; best No. 1, $7.15; Kansai No. 1, $7.10; Canton 14-16, $7.15; and Canton 20-22, $6.65.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The market wound up the week with another exhibition of rising prices and expanding activity. The main development as compared with previous days, was that the upward movement was more general. It took in the rails, as well as the industrials. It extended to stocks recently inactive like the tobaccos and some of the members of the fertilizer and metal group.

The principal advance occurred, however, in the accustomed leaders among the motor, equipment, steel and can stocks. Here some of the impulse undoubtedly came from defeated speculators for the decline. The advance, however, reflected something more than the retreat of a short interest and probably included new buying.

There was active short covering in the northwestern railway stocks. The more cheerful view taken over night regarding the anthracite conference showed itself in active buying of Reading, which carried the stock across 76 and Erie first preferred, which made a new high. Union Pacific jumped up sharply, completing a recovery of 7 points from its recent low. Other rails were generally strong, but not so prominent as the industrials.

The market closed strong and fairly up to the best prices of the day.

New York Bond Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Bond prices moved within extremely narrow limits in today's early dealings. Trading was dull, with the general list displaying a firm undertone. Serbian 8s advanced a point and Mexican bonds showed moderate improvement, while Chile 8s of 1946 dropped 1. New Haven 4s of 1956, Rock Island 4s and Pennsylvania 7s, each up about a point, featured the railroad list. Industrial mortgages showed few changes. United States Government bonds held steady.

HOG TRADE IS ACTIVE AND PRICES RANGE UP

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., Aug. 18.—Receipts today estimated: Cattle and calves, 700; hogs, 5000; sheep, [illegible]; horses and mules, 200.

CATTLE—Receipts light. Market nominally steady.

For week—Best native beef steers, 25c to 50c higher; light yearlings, [illegible] higher; butcher cows, strong; canner and cutter cows, 50c higher; bologna bulls, 25c higher; stocker and feeder steers, 25c higher; veal calves, $1.75 higher.

HOGS—About the average supply of hogs was received Saturday, the estimate being 5000 head. Light hogs predominated in numbers with only a few loads of the heavier kinds in evidence.

U. S. WILL SCRAP 750,000 TONS IN 28 FIGHTING SHIPS

Navy Department Is Notified Moment That Last Name Is Written on Limitation Pact at Washington.

FIVE POWERS ACT ON ARMS TREATIES

Anglo - Japanese Alliance Ended and Pacific Agreement Officially Approved at Simple Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Seated about a table in the State Department yesterday, five men recorded the final approval of the powers for the treaties drafted by the arms limitation conference to end naval competition, terminate the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and sweep away the war clouds that have hovered for decades over the Pacific.

It was an epilogue to the Washington negotiations, at which it had been planned to give the place of honor to President Harding, at whose call the conference assembled; but instead the formal deposit of ratifications was performed almost without ceremony.

Secretary Hughes and his colleagues met in the diplomatic reception room, in the presence of only a handful of spectators, including officials of the Department, messengers, and representatives of the press. Ambassador Hanihara acted for Japan and the other Powers were represented by the charges of their embassies here, H. O. Chilton, for Great Britain; Capt. Andre De La Boulaye, for France, and Augusto Rosso for Italy.

Mr. Hughes sat at the head of the table, with the foreign diplomats facing each other at the sides. Without preliminaries, the Secretary stated the purpose of the gathering, and added that at a preliminary meeting in his office the ratifications had been examined and found complete. He then held up a paper embodying the American ratification and placed it in the center of the table.

Scrapping To Begin at Once.

"I herewith deposit the ratifications of the United States," he said. The others followed suit, each pronouncing the same formula. Then documents constituting a record of the day and the hour at which the treaties became effective were passed from hand to hand for signature.

By pre-arrangement, a telephone flash went to the Navy Department at the moment the last name had been written on the naval limitation pact. The ink had not dried on the signatures before orders were speeding over the wires which mean the scrapping of 750,000 tons in fighting ships, new and old, from the navy list. The process of scrapping will begin at once.

The process verbal, which is to form a permanent record of the coming into effect of the naval treaty, embodies the reservation adopted by France, stipulating that the 5-5-3-2-2 ratio established among the five Powers as to capital ships cannot be construed as applying also to the smaller types of war craft, likewise the "alliance" reservation, adopted by the United States Senate, denying any obligation to use armed force under the provisions of the four Power treaty, was made a part of the process verbal by which that pact was made effective. Termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance is automatic under the terms of the four Power agreement.

Progress of Programs Abroad.

From latest advices to the Navy Department, the following summary was made of the progress in several limitation programs abroad prior to exchange of ratification:

British Empire—Total to be scrapped, 24 old ships of 500,000 tons; new ships, none. Proposed construction of four capital ships abandoned before keels were laid and work begun on two capital ships of smaller tonnage; 18 old ships rendered incapable of war service, seven already having been sold.

Japan—Total to be scrapped, 16 old ships of 163,000 tons, and two new ships of [illegible] tons. Work on the capital ships held in state of suspension since signing of treaty and armament removed from nine obsolete ships.

France and Italy—Navies not affected by scrapping program.

Americans Named to League Committee.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Acting upon the recommendation of Secretary Hughes, President Coolige has authorized the appointment of Dr. Rupert Blue of the Public Health Service, Representative Porter, Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Bishop Charles H. Brent, Buffalo, N. Y., as representatives of the United States on the League of Nations Committee having to do with the regulation of opium and other narcotics.

Irish Rebel Leader Under Arrest

EAMON DE VALERA.
His first appearance in public since civil war broke out in Ireland more than a year ago resulted in his arrest. He was addressing a political campaign meeting at Ennis, County Clare. De Valera is a candidate for a seat in the next Dail, and only a few days ago he asserted that only a bullet would prevent his appearance before his prospective constituents.

OFFER BY UNION TO RESUME WORK IF SUITS ARE DROPPED

Contractors Reject Proposal for Again Starting Construction on St. Mary's Hospital.

The Building Trades Council, central body of unions in the building trades, has offered to proceed at once with work on St. Mary's Hospital, which has been delayed for months by a jurisdictional dispute between carpenters and sheet metal workers, provided three contracting firms withdraw injunction suits filed against the unions.

The contractors have rejected the offer. They have obtained a continuance in court, which union officers said would further delay resumption of work on the new hospital building, as well as work on the new Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, Koch Hospital and the St. Louis Training School for the Feeble Minded, which has been delayed by the same jurisdictional dispute. This dispute concerns the installation of metal trim, to the installation of which both carpenters and sheet metal workers have laid claim.

The cost of the projects aggregates $2,040,000.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS' LOCAL IS SUSPENDED BY COUNCIL

Building Trades Organization Acts in Dispute With Elevator Constructors.

Electrical Workers' Local Union No. 1, which has about 450 members engaged in the building trades and repair work, has been suspended from affiliation with the Building Trades Council, the central body of unions in the building trades, for failure to abide by the rules of the Council.

The suspension grew out of a dispute between the electricians and elevator constructors in the reconstruction of the Planters' Hotel Building, both claiming the right to operate an elevator. President McNamara of the Building Trades Council awarded the work to the elevator constructors and the electricians did not accept his decision.

The suspension means that electricians' representatives cannot sit in the councils of the central body nor be represented by council officers in any matters.

Denver Bank Robber Captured.

By the Associated Press.
DENVER, Colo., Aug. 18.—A 22-year-old bandit, who gave his name as Ray McCoy of Athens, Ohio, was captured yesterday by two express delivery men shortly after he had held up George S. Simons, paying teller of the Union State Bank, in the bank, and fled with $340 in bank notes. Abraham Dolidow of Denver and Walter G. Eldridge of Golden overpowered the robber.

Russian General Admitted to U. S.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Gen. Alexandre Lokomsky, formerly Chief of Staff in the Russian army, yesterday was admitted to the United States. He arrived yesterday on the President Wilson, "to begin life afresh," on a lecture platform. He was not permitted to land immediately, because the Russian quota had been filled.

DE VALERA TAKEN TO DUBLIN UNDER GUARD

Irish Rebel Leader Expected to Be Confined in Mount Joy Prison.

By the Associated Press.
DUBLIN, Aug. 18.—Eamon de Valera, the Republican leader, who was arrested at Ennis Wednesday, when he appeared to address a political meeting, arrived in Dublin early this morning under the escort of national troops. He was escorted to the military barracks to be transferred later to Mount Joy prison.

Nominations for the Parliament of the Irish Free State were being made today. There are more than 400 candidates in the field for the 153 seats, but it is unlikely that all of these will be willing to furnish the required deposit of £150, and it is expected that several will retire.

The pro-Government party has put forward 111 candidates, but it is possible that this number will be increased before the end of the day. Republican aspirants for the Legislature number 85; however, there may be more before the balloting is over.

In addition, there are many representatives of the farmer and labor parties to be nominated and perhaps the independents as well.

On Sunday will begin a week of intensive electioneering, during the course of which there is likely to be considerable turmoil, inasmuch as excitement over the contest grows with the approach of Aug. 27.

President Cosgrave is scheduled to speak on Sunday at Ennis, County Clare, where the ferment due to De Valera's arrest has not subsided.

HOLY SEE BACKS MUSSOLINI'S RULING ON FIUME DIVORCES

Premier Holds Those Who Take on Citizenship to Get Decree Cannot Again Become Italians.

Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Co.'s, New York World and Post-Dispatch.
ROME, Aug. 18.—The Holy See has officially approved Premier Mussolini's decision that Italians, who take on Fiume citizenship in order to get a divorce, cannot again become Italians.

This decision closes the loophole of escape from matrimony to those rich enough to pay for the lengthy and costly proceedings of naturalization at Fiume. Also Italy will not recognize Fiume divorces.

Divorce champions have given up all hope of getting divorce sanctioned by Parliament for some time to come.

MINERS AND OPERATORS TO RESUME CONFERENCE

U. S. Commission Informs Leaders That Public Is Becoming Alarmed Over Situation.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—At the direct demand of the United States Coal Commission, miners' union officials and representatives of mine operators in the anthracite region today agreed to go back into joint conference Monday to seek terms for a new wage contract that may become effective Sept. 1.

The coal commission members, however, held themselves from expressing any over-optimism as to the prospects of keeping the anthracite mines running after Sept. 1.

John Hays Hammond, its chairman and his associates, it was said, would return to Washington and report the results attained to President Coolidge.

The commission yesterday called in Samuel D. Warriner, chairman of the Operators' Policy Committee, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers. The two leaders were presented with a letter which pointed out that the public mind is "beginning to be seriously alarmed over the question of whether there is to be another suspension of anthracite mining Sept. 1."

Mr. Lewis and Mr. Warriner, summoning their associates, agreed quickly on the terms of a terse letter of reply. Jointly the miners and operators said they would resume conference at Atlantic City Monday and "earnestly endeavor to reach an agreement by Sept. 1."

Failing in such an agreement, the operators said, they would seek an understanding that the mines should keep on running while the wage conference proceeded, with the terms of its final form to be retroactive to Sept. 1. The miners asked that this matter be left to the joint conference.

AMITY CONFERENCE DELEGATES RETURN FROM MEXICO CITY

Warren and Payne Reach San Antonio but Refuse to Discuss Their Report.

By the Associated Press.
SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 18.—Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne, American delegates to the amity conference in Mexico City, passed through San Antonio last night, en route to Washington, where they will report to Secretary of State Hughes. Neither of the delegates would consent to be interviewed upon their arrival here, and declared they had nothing to say for publication.

The diplomats were entertained at a dinner by the Chamber of Commerce, but they did not accept the invitation until they were assured they would not be asked to make addresses and no newspaper men would be present.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—In the event diplomatic relations are resumed between the United States and Mexico, there will be no haste, it was stated today at the White House, in the appointment of an Ambassador to Mexico City. Some time naturally would be required, it was said, before selection of an envoy could be announced, inasmuch as the record of the recent Mexico City conferences which is being brought here by the American commissioners, John Barton Payne and Charles B. Warren, will be carefully studied by State Department officials before a decision is reached as to the advisability of recognizing the Mexican Government.

DECLINE IN WHOLESALE PRICES CONTINUED DURING JULY

Some Farm Products Went Up But Gain Was Offset By Drop of Others.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Wholesale prices, which began to decline last May, continued on the downward trend through July, the Department of Labor reported today. The decline from April to July represented 5 per cent, while from June to July it was 1 1-3 per cent. The decrease was figured on prices for 404 commodities.

A comparison of July prices with those in the same month a year ago showed a decline in the general level of 2.5 per cent, due chiefly to the decrease for fuel and lighting materials.

The largest decrease from June to July was shown for the group of cloths and clothing, due mainly to declines in cotton goods and raw and spun silk. The decrease in this group was more than 2.5 per cent. In the group of farm products advances in corn, cattle, eggs, timothy and clover hay, hops, onions and potatoes were more than offset by declines in wheat, oats, rye, lambs, cotton, beans, alfalfa, hay and hides, causing a net decline of more than 2 per cent.

Decreases approximating 2 per cent were recorded for the groups of metals and metal products and building materials, while smaller decreases were shown for foods, fuel and lighting materials and miscellaneous commodities.

STORMY PARTISAN DEBATE IN CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Calling Up of Resolution On Redistricting Causes Disorder and Adjournment.

By the Associated Press.
JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 18.—The constitutional convention closed its afternoon session yesterday with a heated debate over redistricting. The introduction of a resolution by Mrs. W. W. Martin of Fayette, calling up the report of the committee on senatorial redistricting for consideration, threw the convention into disorder. Numerous motions to adjourn were offered. As soon as one motion was voted down, another was offered. After considerable discussion and debate the Martin resolution was voted down.

Motion that he vote by which it was defeated be reconsidered was passed by the convention.

Then began the first filibuster in the convention. Spokesmen for both parties asserted on the floor that the opposition had the majority, and opened tactics intended to delay the consideration of the report.

After two hours of speeches, roll calls, calling the absentees, and motions for adjournment, the convention finally adjourned until Monday afternoon at 2:30.

Members of the convention said after the adjournment that they were fearful that the partisanship which has arisen in the convention since introduction of the redistricting matter will greatly hamper if not entirely destroy the work of the convention, one member even went so far as to say that the convention would not be able again to get down to business without working on strictly party lines.

GRIFFIS DENIES PART IN ATTACK ON BERGDOLL

At Hearing, He Shows His Car Did Not Have Enough Gasoline for Trip to Paris.

By the Associated Press.
MOSBACH, Germany, Aug. 18.—Hooven Griffis and Victor Nielsen, at their preliminary hearing yesterday in connection with the recent attempt to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the American draft evader, denied any knowledge of such an attempt. One point brought out by Griffis was that at the time of his arrest the gasoline tank of his automobile was nearly empty, which statement was verified by the police who confiscated the acr.

The authorities contended the plan was to carry off Bergdoll to Paris, but Griffis maintained there was scarcely enough gasoline in the tank to carry him to Heidelberg, where he intended to spend the night.

That Prince Gagarin, who was arrested with Griffis and Nielsen, was in the automobile at the time was explained as merely a coincedence. Griffis declared he and Nielsen were passing through Eberbach Friday night and became confused because there were no lights and they were not familiar with the highway. They stopped a moment to inquire the way to Heidelberg when Prince Gagarin came along and volunteered to guide them to the edge of Eberbach and put them on the right road.

Griffis denied knowledge either of Carl Schmidt, who was killed in the alleged attempt to kidnap Bergdoll, or Roger Sperber, an American resident of Paris, who was wounded.

According to the authorities an American army lieutenant's uniform was found among Griffis' effects, but he explained he was wearing civilian clothes as he did not care to don the uniform in Germany.

The authorities have not yet confronted Griffis, Nielsen or Prince Gagarin with the statement of Sperber in which the wounded man accuses Griffis of having engineered the alleged plot.

WHITE HOUSE GRATIFIED OVER TREND IN CUBAN SITUATION

Natives Said to Realize That There Is an Obligation to See That Government Lottery Ends.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Gratification was expressed yesterday at the White House over the receipt of reports which were said to indicate a more favorable trend in the Cuban situation. The Cuban public, it was said, apparently realizes that there is an obligation on its part, especially since a $50,000,000 loan recently was negotiated with American banking interests to cover internal reforms, to see that the Government definitely abandons the lottery system.

As for the railroad consolidation bill, which has brought protests from Americans having property interests on the island on the ground that it would prove confiscatory, information received here was said to indicate a growing appreciation of the spirit of the Platt amendment providing for fair treatment of Americans in Cuba.

BUDGET BALANCING URGED BY INTERPARLIAMENTARY UNION

Conference at Copenhagen Adopts Resolution Opposing Artificial Stabilization of Exchange.

By the Associated Press.
COPENHAGEN, Aug. 18.—The present economic and financial condition of Europe is menacing the hopes of a permanent peace, says a resolution adopted yesterday by the Inter-Parliamentary Union Conference at its closing meeting. All nations are called on to put their finances in good shape by balancing their budgets as a necessary preliminary to the stabilization of exchanges, and to do away with artificial trade barriers, which are declared to be standing in the way of a restoration of the economic system.

The conference urged that means be found to extend credits to those countries whose financial position was too weak to permit of restoration without outside aid. A committee was appointed to consider possible steps by the union to aid in improving the situation. The opinion was expressed in the resolution that all measures aiming at artificial stabilization of exchanges were useless so long as the nations neglected to put their own finances in order. Resolutions on disarmament were referred to the executive committee of the union.

Palestine Jews Coming To U. S.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Aug. 18.—The rush of Palestine Jews to the United States continues, according to the Daily Mail's Jerusalem correspondent. He says that every evening lines of prospective emigrants form outside the American consulate to wait throughout the night to obtain visas in the morning. More than three hundred were granted between Monday and Friday of this week.

What the Klan Stands For.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR editorial, K K K Cocksureness, of August 13, was a dandy. It had truth and fairness written all over it, and in my estimation those two virtues are enough to make any article stand out prominently before the eyes of a democratic people such as we Americans are. Last winter when the klan gained so much notoriety through the long series of murderous assaults upon citizens in the South, I was half inclined to regard the organization as a mere leakage of human debris in the perforated side of our ship of state that would eventually be easily patched by the swift and silent arms of the United States Government when we had safely passed through the reconstruction period.

But in the last few weeks I have awakened to the fact that klanism is not altogether an ephemeral bubble blown before the public by notoriety seekers and sensationalists. It is far more dangerous a movement guided by the most disastrous of all human classes, the religious fanatic or the single-minded man and woman who are not content to reap the harvests of a God-inspiring free country like we have; who let the germ of hate breed within their hearts to such an extent that they know no fairness, no love but for themselves, no fellowship, but the demoniacal master of masked superiority and might.

What is the goal of the Ku Klux Klan? Is it to exterminate those who worship God not according to Klan principles? Is the Catholic a dangerous citizen because he humbly asks God's blessing with rites and ceremonies different to the principles of protestantism that the klan upholds?

It is the height of idiocy to think that an educated people will condescend to be led by a mob hidden under a cloak of deceit, fighting against religious liberty and race equalization, masquerading under a cross as a sacrilegious symbol of hypocrisy. An organization that has no just principles, no ideals, no goal other than to crush thousands of fair-minded citizens who fought shoulder to shoulder with every creed and class to make this the glorious country it is today.

If klanism predominates it will only be after a carnage, more terrifying and hideous than the pages of history has yet recorded. Force, fear and even death will not stop a red-blooded man from worshiping as he believes and if the black plague of a religious war sweeps over America there will be hundreds lying martyred upon the fields of a country once glorified by its laws of religious toleration and freedom.

Opera Suggestions for 1924.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I AM one of the Municipal Opera patrons. If you are receiving any repertory suggestions for the 1924 season, I would like to offer one, as I have heard most of the road companies during the last 25 years—the former Castle Square Co., the Park Opera Co. and most of the Municipal Opera productions. My suggestion is as follows:

"Serenade," "Woodland," "The Pink Lady," "The Wizard of Oz," "Erminie," "Robin Hood" (revival), "Patience," "Princess Bonnie," "Martha" and "The Merry Monarch," with William Danforth, William McCarthy, Craig Campbell, James Stevens, Detmar Poppen, Elsie Thiede and Dorothy Maynard.

The Fairground Pool.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THAT Fairground swimming pool business is sure getting to be a joke. One day last week I went over there at 2:30. The lady at the little window said: "All over for the day." Next day I went over a little earlier, and the lady said: "No more suits." The following day I went over, and the lady said "Nothing doing until 3 o'clock." Today I went over there, and the pool was closed. Lord knows why. It's just a plain, common Monday, and it don't take a week to empty and refill that pool, I know.

It seems strange that we should be paying pennies on everything we buy and footing curious year-end bills for so-called playgrounds and recreation grounds when you would have to make reservations at least a week ahead to use 'em. That Fairground pool is big enough to let people go right in and come right out whenever they feel like it. How come they don't have shifts, rules, closing hours and closing days at private swimming pools? If you want to swim these days, you had better go to a private pool, or take a week off from work to study and take advantage of the "system" at our public swimming pool.

That Fairground pool is a splendid thing and it should be freed from red tape and fat-headed officialdom, so the people can use it when they want to.

THE UPPER MISSISSIPPI REVIVAL.

With the departure of the power barge, LaCrosse, yesterday afternoon, the first all-freight service in the history of the upper Mississippi was inaugurated.

The LaCrosse is carrying a cargo of 75 tons of St. Louis products—equivalent to five freight cars—consigned as far north as Minneapolis and St. Paul. The voyage, it is expected, will be made in nine or ten days. On this initial trip the boat will travel only during the day, tying up at night. But other boats of this new line, owned and operated by the Transit River Co., composed of St. Paul business men, will travel both night and day, cutting the time approximately in half.

These new boats are specially designed for upper river service. They can operate with a three-foot draft if necessary. They are propelled by stern wheel, which is so constructed that it can be raised or lowered according to the requirements of depth and tonnage. They have a maximum capacity of 150 tons.

Those boats are small compared with the Leviathans of the Federal Barge Line, but this disadvantage, necessitated by present river conditions, will in part be offset by economical operation. Four men will constitute the crew, oil is to be used as fuel, and the lack of terminal facilities will in some measure be overcome by derricks, on the principle of those used on the Great Lakes, by which freight is expeditiously loaded or unloaded.

Negotiations now under way for exchange of freight with the Federal Barge Line will, of course, be satisfactorily concluded, as a result of which it will be possible for the first time for the St. Paul and Minneapolis shipper to ship the entire river's length by barge.

That there is hazard for the St. Paul business men who have invested their money in this project may be conceded. But pioneers—and these men are pioneers in the truest sense—never have been deterred by possibility of loss. In a way, perhaps, it is unfortunate that private citizens should be required to incur this risk. Were Washington fully aware of the country's transportation situation, which is speeding on to a crisis, and appreciative of the possibilities of the Mississippi's development, we should today be witnessing a vast activity all along the river—we should be witnessing the construction of a great transportation system of incalculable value to the entire country. But the Government does not yet view the problem and the opportunity offered by the Mississippi with that vision. Consequently it devolves upon individuals of courage and foresight to venture their fortunes in proving the river's transportational value.

The campaign of educating the Government as to the Mississippi's capacity to serve urgent traffic needs goes on, not so rapidly as could be wished, but steadily and convincingly. On the lower river the Federal Barge Line has a record of fine and growing accomplishment. Some day the Mississippi, from St. Paul to New Orleans, will teem with the trade of the world. When it does the names of the men who are backing this latest venture will have a place in the roster of the Mississippi's resurrection.

EXPERIMENTS IN STREET CARS.

St. Louis street car passengers use two styles of street cars, not including trailers. In the old style car you enter by the rear door. In the new you must enter by the front door and go out by the side doors. Short-sighted persons must wait until the car is almost stopping and then make a rush to front or rear, as the style of car makes necessary. With the substitution by the new of all the old style cars, this trouble will be obviated.

Once inside, there are several striking differences between new and old. In the old style car, everyone pays fare on entering. That bother is over. In the new, you may stop in the front half of the car, keeping your fare until you are ready to leave by the central doors. Or you may pass the conductor, pay at once, and pack yourself in the crowd at the rear. If you stay in the front, the payment of fare is not off your mind. And you will most likely have to stand, as the seats along the side hold few passengers, the front part of the car having evidently been built to hold a big crowd of standing passengers. Fortunately, there are a lot of metal poles to hang on to.

The worst feature about the new cars, however, is lack of ventilation. There are no transoms, only small holes in the roof. The upper windows cannot be opened. And in hot weather the cars of this make become perfect ovens.

If further experiments in street cars are to be made, why not employ a committee of street car passengers to make suggestions on construction? That would be the thing to do if the cars were to be made for service as well as for profit.

THE RAILROADS OPEN FIRE.

The railroads entering St. Louis have shown themselves in earnest in taking up the battle against the smoke nuisance. At two meetings at the Railroad Y. M. C. A. this week officers of the roads discussed with foremen and enginemen practical measures for a more perfect combustion of fuel.

While the railroads are interested in smoke elimination as an economic proposition they have shown a commendable friendliness to the St. Louis effort and are willing, if not eager, to let an economical measure serve a civic purpose. As a specimen of what smoke consumption means to the railroads, one of the officers of the Illinois Central stated that if his road had had in 1922 the same per unit fuel consumption it had in 1912, its coal bill would have been $5,000,000 more than it was.

As showing that St. Louis has not been taking advantage of even its simplest opportunities to reduce smoke, one official from Chicago declared his wonder "why St. Louis didn't kick about you fellows. In Chicago we run along the smoke front smokelessly. We know that inspectors are watching 24 hours a day. We got rid of smoke. You fellows can."

With the example of the railroads making a sincere and energetic start in this important cause the next object of expectation will be the St. Louis industries. Have they no interest in fuel conservation that would serve the same civic purpose? Members of the Chamber of Commerce, asked to attend the railroad smoke meeting, were without representation. Declarations of general intention will not eliminate smoke. The industries of St. Louis certainly should not be satisfied to be excelled by the railroads, either in efficiency or civic spirit.

THE Y. M. C. A. VOID.

Lester C. Haworth, the new general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has called attention to probably the most conspicuous void in the institutional life of St. Louis. It is conspicuous because St. Louis differs in this respect from virtually every American city of more than a few thousand inhabitants. We are without a central Y. M. C. A. building for the service of the community and from which to conduct the Y. M. C. A. educational, athletic and club activities.

There has been an extraordinary growth in the "Y" since the war, says Secretary Haworth, but since the old central building at Grand avenue burned the St. Louis organization has been hampered by the lack of a home in which to center its activities. Whereas Chicago has 20 buildings and plans 35 to 40 additional ones in the next 25 years, the "Y" is practically nonexistent and unknown in the great downtown area of St. Louis.

St. Louis young men, and some who are not so young, need the kind of service which is offered by the Y. M. C. A. in every American city and in cities all over the world. The gymnasium and swimming pool are a boon to young manhood. The educational courses may be an important stepping stone in many lives. All activities serve as a useful social medium. The churches which founded the Y. M. C. A. are aware of its benefits from their point of view. A great social and civic service awaits its revival on a normal scale in St. Louis.

FAMILY POLITICS IN IOWA.

ROBERT EMORY EVANS, Representative from the Dakota City, Iowa, district, says one of his friends had an amusing experience while campaigning in a sparsely settled section of that State.

The friend called at a forlorn-looking farmhouse where the wife was busy with the week's washing. Her sleeves were rolled up to her elbows, seven or eight children were playing around the yard, and a mongrel hound was lazily sitting on its haunches on the front porch. The caller politely introduced himself, and told how anxious he was to get the vote of the family, discreetly inquiring as to the political leanings of the household.

Straightening up from the washtub, and mopping her face with her apron, the woman replied: "Well, mister, we are considerably mixed, I reckon. My old man is a Republican, I am a Democrat, our old cow is dry, and I guess the old dog there must be a Socialist, because he just sits around and howls all day." —National Republican.

ADVENTURES OF AN ARTIST.

At an exhibition of my own pictures in the City Art Museum in Forest Park I was standing in the middle of the room with an eye to straightening up a few things when a lady came into the gallery and said: "I think your things are perfectly charming. Do you mind if I bring a friend of mine in to see them? She is in the next room." I assured her I should be delighted to have her do so and at the same time told her it was a public institution and everybody had the right to come into the gallery, and the more the better. She went out of the gallery and reappeared in a few minutes with another lady. The latter made a rapid survey of the things on the walls and said in quite a loud voice, indicating certain pictures as she did so: "I think that is awful, and so is that, and that." Her friend looked terribly embarrassed and said in a tone of voice she never thought would be heard by me: "My dear, you shouldn't make remarks like that; the gentleman who painted them is standing quite close to us." The critical one stiffened in her tracks and said instantly, pointing at a picture on the north wall of the gallery: "I think that is just too lovely." I couldn't refrain from laughing and said: "My dear madam, pray don't spoil things. I was having a perfectly wonderful time listening to your very frank expressions." But the damage was done and the pair left the gallery.

I came to St. Louis during the World's Fair with my wife, two small children and a cocker spaniel from Scituate, Mass. No sleepers were to be had. We made four changes en route. I got by with the dog on the first three changes—on the last lap I was compelled, by the conductor, to take the dog to the baggage car. It was packed to the roof with trunks except in the center of the car where there was a door with a grilled window and two trunks standing below it. I tied the dog on a short chain to a bar of the grill, said to the baggage man, "You look after the dog and I'll look after you," went back into the smoker and fell fast asleep. I awoke to find myself standing up with the absolute conviction in my mind that something terrible was happening to the dog. I ran the length of the car like a madman, grabbed the handle of the baggage car door, turned it. It was locked! I pounded it and kicked it! It opened suddenly and the baggage man stood there rubbing his eyes. I pushed him to one side and rushed ahead and there was the dog hanging at the end of his chain in the throes of strangulation. The baggage man had had to move one of the trunks and put the dog back on the one that remained at the full length of the chain and the dog had fallen off! His poor little soul wirelessed to me and I got to him just in time to save him.

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA.

Have you ever been to Carmel, to Carmel-by-the-Sea?
With the purpling hills behind it, and the tossing sea beside it;
With the tall pines standing o'er it, and the white sands drifting near it,
Have you ever been to Carmel, to Carmel-by-the-Sea?

You must see it in the spring time, in the green and golden spring time,

Down the zigzag streets of Carmel, of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publications, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

PRESIDENT'S FOREIGN POLICY.

From the New Republic.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has announced, as he was of course bound to do, that he will follow the policies of his predecessor. In regard to the project for American participation in the World Court it is legitimate to inquire which of Mr. Harding's attitudes he will take. In the St. Louis speech the President demanded reservations so sweeping that they made indorsement by the Democratic Senators completely impossible. In the San Francisco address, which was made public just before he died, he seemed to have abandoned this attitude. He preferred the World Court, he said, just as it is. But he was willing to consider the objections to it, the main thing being to get the United States into active participation as soon as possible. That even his close associates at Washington are in doubt as to what President Coolidge will do is indicated by the strenuous efforts made by both the friends and foes of the court to rush him off his feet as soon as he had arrived at the capital. It is entirely possible that Mr. Coolidge knows no better than anyone else what he will do. His own temperament will insure his doing nothing until he has given the matter long consideration. For that reason we believe that those who look for prompt action in either direction are doomed to disappointment.

PROSPERITY FACTORS.

From the Washington Post.

WITH the Federal Reserve Board stating that the nation's banks are prepared to extend ample credit for all legitimate enterprises and with railroads functioning at higher efficiency prosperity registers permanency and continuing increase. Financial and transportation conditions are sure symptoms of national conditions. When they are satisfactory, America's prosperity is necessarily at hand. Without adequate credit and without efficient transportation progress of prosperity would necessarily be delayed. The country is fortunate in having a solid financial system and railroads which, with some betterment, can take care of the nation's business. There is no obstacle to long prosperity from now on.

VOLSTEAD AND HIS LAW.

From the New York World.

REPRESENTATIVE VOLSTEAD, author of the national prohibition enforcement statute, has no misgivings concerning the wisdom or ultimate destiny of his legislation. He has no doubt that it works, even in New York. He has taken a few hours to look the city over for himself and is convinced that it is dry. He admits, however, that Government officials, bankers, merchants and Judges occasionally take a drink. Representative Volstead's attitude on that subject is summed up as follows: "Rats! What if they do? There is no harm in a man's taking a drink if it is done in a proper way. Besides, all these people bought their stocks before prohibition came into force." As for the workingman and his thirst, Representative Volstead deals with the question briefly, thus: "Well, he is more efficient and takes a keener delight in his daily toil than he did before, when he was subjected to the deadly lure of beer." If Representative Volstead is an authority on Volstead enforcement—and since he wrote the law he should be—it is true, as we have long suspected, that prohibition is for the poor man. "There is no harm in taking a drink if it is done in the proper way," the proper way being to be rich enough to have laid in an inexhaustible supply before the law took effect.

It Seems to Me

NEW YORK.

One paragraph which we wrote for Thursday's World was a little bit crooked. At any rate it was sophistical, which is about the same thing. A reader wanted to know what sort of "ignorant or foreign person" was Long John Silver, who had the audacity to refer to "The Star-Spangled Banner" as a fine old English drinking song, and we replied that Mr. Silver was an American who had fought in the war and lost a leg.

That was all perfectly true, but the paragraph carried, at least, the implication that we believed Mr. Silver had a better right to impose limits on the ritual of formalized patriotism than somebody who had happened to come in at Ellis Island. And more particularly a better right than any man who had not been near the war at all.

We didn't say that, but the interpretation was possible.

"Well, I fought for my country in France" has been taken pretty generally as a knockdown argument in debates on matters of all sorts. In some parts of the country membership in the American Legion has been accepted as a license to act as censor for the community in regard to what opera companies and motion pictures shall be allowed to go before the public. Strikers have been dealt with summarily by little groups whose qualification to assume control of perplexing economic problems lay in the fact that these vigilantes had served under Pershing. One correspondent meets our statement that "Little Old New York" is an entertaining movie but less than great with the pertinent rejoinder, "What did you do in the great war?"

A much better reply to the man who asked the nationality of Long John Silver would have been that it was not important because, no matter where he happened to be born, "The Star-Spangled Banner" would remain an air originally used for a fine old English drinking song. In fact, the foregoing paragraphs were suggested by Silver.

In the matter of the tariff, the New York transit problem, immigration and the state of the country's finances, we do not admit that the bravest veteran speaks with any more authority than some neighbor who fitted into the furthest deferred of all classifications. Still, when talk of the next war comes up, we do take a particular interest in hearing an expression of opinion from those who fought in the last one.

"I am forming a chapter in the national capital of Long John Silvers' club to sit through national anthems when shoddily applied to the ears of the citizenry," writes Leonard Hall. "So far, it numbers four other ex-heroes and myself. . . . The pathos of the continuous trumpeting of national tunes came to me in our old town of Goncourt, at the foothills of the Vosges. We were lined up for retreat before the mairie. In the village square the regimental band burst into the Marseillaise. In the second story window of the house across the way a frosty-headed old forester looked out at the line of solemn kids, with a lot of pity in his eyes. As the French rabble-rouser, beautiful and terrible, roared out, he shook his head and waved an empty sleeve at us. No attention for him!

"That old bird knew what the tooting of the song meant. It was tooted when he marched off in '14 with his class, and he went out and got an arm blown to glory by a gun 10 miles away because of it. He'd done his snapping into it long before. And he was leaving all the iron-faced business to a line of youngsters going out to try their own luck with the guns.

"It isn't much wonder that some folks shudder when a blatherskite turns on the tune to get a throb from 2000 easy-weepers."

"Before you give in to the intellectuals," writes F. A. Sieverman Jr., "and banish left hooks from the discussion, permit me to untangle the knot you are fumbling with. It is surprising that a dramatic critic, above all, should classify the 10 most interesting sports, or even the first three or four, with nothing more in the way of explanation than the statement that baseball is interesting and tennis is not. You are unusually reticent; and for a critic peculiarly brief.

"Aside from the hundred millions whose opinions do not matter at all, it is probably the dramatic interest that quickens our pulses in any sport. Tennis is a game of speed, where the poor spectator who must view the match from the side of the court grows neck-weary following the flight of the ball in the course of a few games. Climax follows so rapidly on the heels of climax that even the rabid tennis nut is overfed when a Johnson meets a Tilden. I can't find a parallel on the stage for the interest excited by a tennis match. My amateur opinion is that a play with good jokes tumbling over each other as fast as good strokes and heroic recoveries crowd each other in tennis would be foredoomed to failure.

"Baseball, however, provides almost the perfect parallel. You could rewrite almost any good ball game in terms of the drama. Most of the games probably follow the general lines that text-books on the stage outline for playwrights. The games are several thousand per cent more interesting than the efforts of the play writers, because the situations are spontaneous, even if the talk is usually orthodox. Any sport that can bring Babe to bat when the score is tied has all other sports lashed to the barrier. And when Ruth hits it there are a dozen seconds of soul-stirring action that can frequently finish in a slide to the plate, with ball, Babe, catchers, umpires and extra men all arriving at the same sacred moment.

"Obviously, a prizefight partakes somewhat of the nature of tennis, with its rapid give and take; and somewhat of the nature of baseball, with its occasional thrilling climax. The answer is that a prizefight is related to vaudeville. There are the same song and dance teams, the same brands of humor and a high degree of comedy lines from the spectators. You gentlemen of the press who sit in the seats of the mighty, miss most of the important conversation. Not that any of it is worth reporting; most funny stuff isn't. But when the headliners put on their sketch, particularly an artistic performance like Leonard's this week, the dramatic interest runs high."

President Coolidge is a good listener, a so-called excellent source tells the Times correspondent—about the best listener in the United States. "He never argues with a caller, and, as a rule, when the other fellow finishes talking the interview is over." If that is true, we are strong for him, possibly because we are a good deal like him. Only we are not a good listener; we appear to be, but we usually are thinking of something else.

To me the shibboleth that art justifies portrayal of any phase of human strength or weakness is nothing else than a lie invented by those who prefer the immoral and the unwholesome for their own sake, but who are too cowardly to make a frank admission to that effect.—John Golden in the Theater Magazine.

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Dramatic Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—An interesting, moving and highly imaginative play was revealed at the Comedy Theater last night when "Children of the Moon," by Martin Flavin, had its first production. For us the play was marred by a last act which we thought spurious because it sought to find a solution of the story in a blazingly theatrical device rather than by some means more simple and convincing.

Accordingly, the event of the evening, to our mind, was not so much the play as the player. We think that Miss Florence Johns, a young actress little known hereabouts, gave one of the best performances we have seen in some time. Indeed, if we may risk the dangers of prediction and place a wager with one of the bookmakers who deal in futures, we want to have a bet on Miss Johns when she comes to the height of her powers.

Of course luck will be a factor and competition will be keen in any case, since our theater has seldom been so richly endowed with young actresses of high promise. We pick Miss Johns for three reasons: She is not strikingly beautiful, she has a long nose and she can listen. Each of these three things seems to us essential for a woman who would be great upon the stage. We might add that Miss Johns is curiously reminiscent of Jane Cowl in the quick, sudden manner in which she commits herself completely to a gesture.

But the biggest test came in a scene in which she sat upon a sofa and listened to what another actress had to say. The other actress was Beatrice Terry, a player who carried through a gripping scene in highly skillful and arresting fashion. And yet before that scene was done we were not watching Miss Terry, nor even listening very intently to what she said, for the whole tide of the situation flowed across the face of Florence Johns, who was silent and motionless. We wanted to know most of all what it meant to her and even when she had no line to speak she told us.

In the final act we were inclined to find some fault with Miss Johns for muting speeches below the point where they were audible. And yet even then we could not pretend ignorance of what it was all about.

As in several plays which we have seen lately, our belief grew that very little was known about the art of acting before this generation. Last night, for instance, we saw Miss Henrietta Crosman return to the stage after a long absence and give a performance charming and skillful and yet rooted in a technical theory in which we have no belief. Miss Crosman does too much with a line. She will not permit anything which she says to be unimportant.

Even the trivial must be colored and have value. We have the impression, possibly a false one, that there was a day in which everybody played that way. It is chiefly the youngsters who have mastered the eloquence of economy. Still our rule will not stand if we make it too general, for we are quite sure that there was one particular speech upon which Miss Crosman spent five minutes which Mrs. Fiske would have delivered most effectively by coughing three times in her handkerchief.

As for the play itself, we have evidently reserved far less space than it deserves. It tells a rather modern minded story of a possessive mother in terms of slightly florid tragedy. Failing to break the will of her daughter who would marry, it is the mother who tells her a terrific scene that she and all her father's kin are cursed with a moon madness which seizes upon them when moonlight is at flood. The drive and power of this particular scene is terrific and ought to make the play a huge success since it has more rage and passion in it than anything else in town. At the end the author cannot resist overworking his excellent material. He sends the potentially mad girl and her lover up toward the moon in an aeroplane to crash to certain death. There was no moon madness in the man and it seemed to us that he behaved as he did merely to oblige the playwright with a bizarre ending.

However, the play is amply good enough to demand your attention, but those who go will waste their time if they ask for any part of our bet on Miss Florence Johns.

SIX CONFEDERATE LEADERS FOR STONE MOUNTAIN GROUP

To Select Three Men to Be Carved With Davis, Lee and Jackson.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 18.—There will be six figures in the central group of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial, and these will be Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and three others to be selected by a commission composed of the state historians of the thirteen states which participated in the southern confederacy, it is announced by the Stone Mountain Memorial Association.

The commission will submit their selections to the executive committee of the association.

Harrison Randolph, chairman of the association executive committee, pointed out that the central group of figures should not be confused with the state groups consisting of five confederate generals to represent each of the thirteen states. These, he added, are entirely separate and distinct from the central group and have been selected by a committee in each of the states.

CONCERT BY CONCORDIA BAND IS BROADCAST

Marches and Overtures, Played With Spirit, Sent Out by K S D.

Marches and overtures with one or two popular selections constituted a program presented for broadcasting by Station K S D last night. The musicians were members of the Concordia Turners' Band of this city, and the concert was given under the direction of Otto E. Koehne.

The best numbers were the marches, given with a swing and spirit. The last number especially, the "Officer of the Day" march, was notable. This merged into the "Star Spangled Banner," which was played at the end of the concert.

The Turners' band consists of 35 pieces and all the men are members of the Concordia Gymnastic Club. This was the second band concert given this week at Station K S D, the first having been Tuesday night when the First Missouri Infantry Band presented a program, under the direction of P. A. Crow.

SAYS U. S. IN LEAGUE WOULD HELP EUROPE

Daniel Willard, Home, Tells of Conditions in France and Great Britain.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Cunard liner Aquitania docked at Pier 54 at 11 o'clock last night, five hours late because of fog.

Among the passengers was Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O. railroad, who said he had been abroad for a brief trip and had visited the battle area of France. He said he found France in a strong economic condition, but that England had a large amount of unemployment.

"If the United States had entered the League of Nations, with or without reservations," he said, "the economic situation undoubtedly would have been better, but I prefer not to make any statement of opinion as to what the United States should do."

Willard said he favored the consolidation of all railroads as proposed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. "As far as the B. & O is concerned," he said, "it is in sympathy with the plan to consolidate all roads in the country into seven groups."

CARDS 7, BROOKLYN 1; JACK SMITH, DOAK AND BOTTOMLEY STAR

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 18.—Bill Doak held the Robins to five hits today, and the Cardinals won the final contest, 7 to 1, for an even break on the four-game series.

Sharing honors with Doak in the victory were Jack Smith and Jim Bottomley. Smith got three hits, stole two bases and scored three runs. Bottomley starred by hitting in the pinch. One of his safeties was a three-bagger.

The Rickeymen got 14 hits off George Smith in eight innings and one off Decatur in the ninth.

A play-by-play account of the game follows:

FIRST INNING.

BROOKLYN—Fournier singled to center and took second when Doak fumbled Meuller's return throw. Bailey walked. Taylor forced Bailey, Hornsby to Freigau. The Cardinals contended Bailey deliberately interfered with Freigau's throw for a double play, but the protesting did no good. Doak held Fournier on third and tossed out High. Stock tossed out Berg. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

CARDINALS — Berg threw out Flack. J. Smith beat out a hit to short. J. Smith stole second. Hornsby walked. Johnston tossed out Bottomley. Stock struck out. NO RUNS.

Smith scoring and Neis taking third. T. Griffith hit into a double play, Stock to Freigau to Bottomley, Neis holding third. Fournier rolled out to Bottomley. ONE RUN.

FOURTH INNING.

CARDINALS — Mueller walked. Neis lost McCurdy's fly in the sun and it went for a double, Mueller taking third. Berg threw out Freigau, the runners holding their bases. Doak bunted for a squeeze play, but Taylor got the ball and tagged Mueller. High threw out Flack. NO RUNS.

BROOKLYN—Bailey fanned and was thrown out, McCurdy to Bottomley. Taylor walked. High flied to Mueller. Doak tossed out Berg. NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

CARDINALS—J. Smith was safe on Fournier's fumble. Hornsby popped to Johnston. Bottomley singled to center, sending J. Smith to third. Stock sent a sacrifice fly to Bailey, scoring J. Smith. Mueller beat out a hit to Johnston. McCurdy grounded out to Fournier. ONE RUN.

BROOKLYN — G. Smith struck out. Neis bunted and was tossed out by Doak. Hornsby tossed out Johnston. NO RUNS.

SIXTH INNING.

CARDINALS—Freigau singled to center. Doak sacrificed, Fournier to Johnston on first. Johnston threw out Flack, Freigau going to third. J. Smith grounded to Fournier. NO RUNS.

BROOKLYN—Hornsby tossed out T. Griffith. Bottomley made a good catch of Fournier's low line drive. Bailey struck out. NO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

CARDINALS—Hornsby singled to left for his first hit of the series after having gone to bat 14 times without a hit. On the hit and run, Bottomley singled to right, putting Hornsby on third. Stock grounded to High, whose throw to the plate hit Hornsby, and Hornsby scored. Bottomley took third and Stock second on the error. Mueller beat out a hit to Fournier, scoring Bottomley and sending Stock to third. McCurdy grounded to Johnston, who tagged Mueller on the line and tossed out McCurdy, completing a double play. Stock scored on the play. Freigau dropped a hit in short left. Doak struck out. THREE RUNS.

BROOKLYN — Taylor flied to Flack. High went out the same way. Hornsby tossed out Berg. NO RUNS.

HIBSCHMAN-CARSTENS TEAM WINS NET FINAL

Joe Hibschman and Rolan Carstens won the men's doubles championship of the O'Fallon Park Tennis Club by defeating the team of Eugene Koch and Ed Beckmann in the final round. The score was 3—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—3.

Koch and Beckmann started well in the opening set, which they won and continued their accurate playing as the second set began. Hibschman and Carstens, however, became steadier, captured the set and had no difficulty taking the next two.

Former Leader of Brownies Here to Confer With Ball

LEO ALEXANDER FOHL.

It was erroneously reported in Chicago dispatches that President Phil Ball of the Browns would be in St. Louis this morning to talk over with Lee Fohl, former manager of the Browns, the conditions under which Fohl was released and especially the wording in which the release was couched.

Ball yesterday held a conference in Chicago with Ban Johnson. It followed one Fohl had previously held with the American League president. It is expected that as a result of these conferences, the wrinkles in the situation will be removed without friction.

Butch Loses to Joe Burman But Battles Gamely

Floored in Eighth Round, St. Louis Featherweight Gets Up and Fights Furiously.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 18.—George Butch, the St. Louis featherweight, stepped a little bit too far forward last night at Aurora, in colliding with Joey Burman, Chicago's world's champion bantamweight in New York, but, while he came off with the verdict against him, he convinced several thousands that he "has the goods."

It took everything Burman had to win. Joey re-hurt his tender right hand, in the second round, and tried to skid through the rest of the distance using only his left. He was successful in one round only, the third, and from then on had to employ both, so fast was Butch carrying the milling to him.

Butch's battle was pleasing to watch for he was aggressive all the time. Several times he shook up Burman but the wise Joey was too much of a ring general.

Butch Is Knocked Down.

In the eighth round, just as it looked as if Butch would slip through with a victory, Burman caught him on the chin and knocked him to the floor. George rolled over several times, but was up in an instant and landed on his feet facing Burman. He tore in like a wild man.

More big matches are in sight for Butch as a result of his showing.

This bout shared spotlight honors with the one between Tillie Herman and Jock Malone, but it carried off all the applause. Herman persisted in fouling Malone and, although Jock did not want to win that way, he was forced to accept it in the third round, after the referee walked out of the ring.

Eddie McGoorty, the veteran middleweight, refereed the Butch bout and declared that he thought Butch was the best-looking prospect he's seen in many moons.

Miss Wills Wins Women's National Net Championship

California Girl Defeats Mrs. Mallory in Straight Sets, 6-2, 6-1.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Miss Helen Wills, the 17-year-old girl from Berkeley, Cal., today became the women's United States singles tennis champion, when she defeated Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory of New York in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1, on the West Side Club court. Prior to her defeat at the hands of Miss Wills today, Mrs. Mallory had won the championship

First Set.

Both started erratically, Mrs. Mallory taking the first game from her young rival after it had gone to deuce twice on a succession of errors. It was a break through service but Miss Wills retaliated by taking the second game on the champion's service, 4—1.

Miss Wills dropped the third game at love on her own service. They rallied brilliantly in the fourth game, in which Miss Wills again reversed the tables, winning a love game on the champon's delivery.

Miss Wills took the lead on her own service in the fifth game, passing Mrs. Mallory twice with booming placement shots. The gallery was asked to refrain from applauding during the rallies. Three errors by the champion and a placement ace gave Miss Wills the sixth game and the lead at 4—2.

Miss Wills also took the seventh game at love on four errors by Mrs. Mallory. The California girl was playing in spectacular fashion and out-generaling her veteran opponent.

Miss Wills won the eighth game and the set, 6—2, after a brilliant exchange. The last game went to deuce twice.

Second Set.

Miss Wills served a love game to start the second set and won the second on the champion's delivery. 5—3, a cross-court placement giving her the deciding point. The coast girl made it three straight with the aid of two smashing placements that Mrs. Mallory barely was able to get her racquet on.

Mrs. Mallory won the fourth game on her own servce. 5—3. It was the first game Mrs Mallory had won since the third game of the first set. Miss Wills quickly made the count 4—1 in her favor by taking the fifth game, 4—1.

The sixth game sparkled with spectacular rallies. It went to deuce three times before Miss Wills took it, 7—5, bringing off a placement ace across court for the winning point.

Miss Wills won the seventh and final game of the last set on her own service. Three nets by the champion and a flashing placement by the coast girl provided the winning points, 4—2.

WRAY'S COLUMN

The Danforth Mystery.

DAVE DANFORTH can pitch clean baseball of a high order. Thursday's game proved that. A three-hit effort against the marvelous row of New York sluggers is an achievement.

Why, then, should he stoop to tampering methods, as charged he does, as President Ban Johnson in a telegram to the Post-Dispatch seems convinced he does?

Are the Umpires all wrong in their suspicions?

Is Manager Lee Fohl wrong in his belief?

Is President Johnson's statement that he thinks Danforth afflicted with an incurable penchant for doctoring the ball without adequate foundation?

Has Danforth been persecuted rather than prosecuted?

Proof Is Demanded.

FANS who are asking the above questions soon will begin to insist that something be proved definitely against Dave or that he be let alone to continue his pitching without being hopped on.

Thus far no one has caught Danforth doing anything. His offense, if any, has been in throwing discolored balls.

He says he himself has not discolored them, but that they crop up in the course of play.

Thursday Danforth himself inspected such balls and threw them out himself. He invited the officials and players to do likewise. Fifty-eight balls were tossed aside.

Yet Dave hurled one of the best games of the season!

Such pitching demands something more from his accusers than suspicion.

It demands proof.

Queer About Fohl.

LEO ALEXANDER FOHL is in St. Louis to wait until Phil De Catesby Ball turns up.

In the meantime St. Louis fans have pondered the case of Fohl and are still wondering about him. No manager in history ever went through what Fohl has experienced. For Fohl was released from two clubs in midseason, despite the fact that on the first occasion his team was in SECOND place and the next time his club was in THIRD place, despite having suffered an irreparable injury through the loss of Sisler.

In Cleveland Fohl could not win the fans. In St. Louis he could not win the players or his employers.

It must be said that, if there is a reason for it all, it is not to be found in President Ball's statement that Fohl had been released for the good of the game.

Fohl's reputation is clean. What Ball seems to have meant was that Fohl was released "for the good of the team."

Many a lawsuit lurks in one misapplied word.

Kaiser May Box In Preliminaries

Commission Lifts Suspension of Local Bantamweight Star Conditionally.

That boxing matches will be permitted in St. Louis so long as they are conducted under the club plan was the announcement made yesterday by Ed Butler, a member of the Boxing Commission. Butler made this assertion following a recent conference with Gov. Hyde. The Governor recently stopped the scheduled Firpo-Cowler contest.

The commission at its meeting yesterday announced that the membership law would be rigidly enforced.

Johnny "Pewee" Kaiser, who for some time reigned as St. Louis' leading bantamweight, was reinstated to box in preliminaries at yesterday's meeting of the commission. Kaiser had been suspended after his match with Patsy Flanagan, in which he was disqualified by Referee Walter Heisner for continued holding.

Kaiser was told that if he did the right thing he would soon again rise to the ranks of the main-event boys.

The application of Jack Callahan, who seconded Kaiser in his contest with Flanagan, for reinstatement was denied.

Permits were issued for four boxing shows at yesterday's meeting. They were as follows:

Aug. 23, Business Men's A. A., at Armory, with Bud McHale and Dan Taylor meeting in 10-round feature.

Aug. 30, Dunbar A. C., at Stars' Park.

Sept. 3, Angelica Club, place not named.

Sept. 11, Lafayette A. C., at Coliseum.

TWO TOURNAMENTS HELD AT NORTH HILLS CLUB

Two golf tournaments were held at the North Hills Country Club yesterday, one for members of the Cooperative Club of St. Louis and the other for the St. Louis Realtors. In the Cooperative Club affair H. Wantz won the low medal prize with a 98, N. T. Patterson won the blind bogey competition and J. H. Cassidy had whatever consolation one can get out of the booby prize.

In the real estate men's tournament F. H. Wallace stroked the 18 holes in 94 for low medal honors. Ed Bokern was second, with 97, and Charles E. Richardson was given the booby prize. There were 45 entrants in the Realtors' tourney, while 30 competed in the Cooperative Club event.

Ruth's Batting Gives the Yanks 5-4 Victory Over the Brownies; Senators Open Series Today

Babe Hits Home Run in First Inning With Dugan on Base and in the Eighth He Starts Winning Rally With a Double—McManus Gets Three Hits.

By Dent McSkimming.

Whether Babe Ruth is named the most valuable player in the American League this season or not, the fact remains that he is winning the pennant for the New York Yankees and it is highly probable that he will win for them a world's championship.

Yesterday the Browns and the Yanks thundered along in a neck-and-neck race with St. Louis threatening to forge to a winning lead. Joe Bush pitched a game of only ordinary merit and withal the Browns looked the equal of the Yanks—except for one fact. The Yanks had Babe Ruth. New York won, 5 to 4.

Babe on his first appearance at the plate lifted Vangilder's pitch into the right field bleachers for a home-run, scoring Dugan. In the eighth he started off with a two-base hit and later scored. He also found Van for a single and a walk.

If the Browns could have nullified in any way the Bambino's presence in the Yankee lineup they might have won the ball game.

Viewing the game in retrospect, it is easy to see where the Browns might have held the Yanks to four runs, rather than five. But, when the eighth inning arrived and the Yanks needed one run to regain the lead, up popped the Babe with his double and a rally was started which brought home not one run but two.

Browns' Defense Falters.

Upon this occasion it appeared that the Brownie defense wobbled. Bill Jacobson and Marty McManus were not prepared to cut off Ward at second after the Yank had singled to center, sending Pipp to third.

With Pipp on first Ward sent a line single to center and Jacobson, with no chance to catch Pipp at third, whipped a sharp throw to second. The throw was not perfect and McManus fumbled momentarily, giving Ward a chance to slide safely into second. Ward, alert, had noticed that second base was left unguarded. Pipp scored on the next play then Scott sent a sacrifice fly to Jacobson.

At all other times the Browns were on their toes. In the fifth Ruth fouled off the good pitches until he finally earned a walk. He remained on first as Smith flied to Tobin. Then, Pipp grounded to Gerber, near second base. Ruth was on second as Gerber fielded the ball and therefore there was no chance for a force-out. Gerber tossed to first, retiring Pipp by a step.

Third Baseman Homer Ezzell, intent upon the play at first, had left third base open and Ruth, without hesitation, sped on for third. There was a desperate race for the bag between Ruth and Ezzell. Schliebner, after receiving Gerber's throw, shot a hurried peg to third. The throw was high, Ruth slid low and on the far side of the bag. Ezzell leaped into the air, speared the ball and dived down into the prostrate Ruth. He was out.

Best Play of the Game.

This was the most spectacular play of the day. It was the third out and it helped the Brownies in fighting off the inevitable for a few innings longer.

Yesterday's victory gave the Yanks the series, 2 games to 1. For the season New York has won 14 games and the Browns 5.

Donie Bush is here today with his Washington Club, Nick Altrock, Muddy Ruel, Walter Johnson, et al.

Johnnie Tobin, up five times yesterday, went hitless. He found three men on the bases in the eighth and he swung hard, but popped to Dugan. Tobin hit the ball right on the seam three times, sending flies to Smith and Witt.

Fred Schliebner also had a bad day with the bat. He fanned in the eighth with two men on. Schliebner hits better on the road than at home.

McManus figured in the scoring of three of the Browns' runs. His double in the first scored Williams' his single in the sixth was converted into a run and in the eighth he singled and later scored.

Homer Ezzell drove in two runners in the sixth with a single. He tried to reach second on Ruth's throw to the plate but Joe Dugan intercepted the peg and cut down Ezzell.

BOSSY MARY

By WINIFRED BLACK

I'VE always wondered what was the matter with Mary.

Mary's handsome, Mary's more than ordinarily intelligent, and Mary's as good as gold.

She's tall, and she's stately, and she has black hair and deep-blue eyes, and she wears black velvet and looks like a queen, or white satin and sapphires and looks like someone out of the fairy book who ought to be sitting on a golden throne with a whole court around her.

Mary's well-to-do and Mary's practical. She makes a lot of money in her investments and she knows just when to buy and just when to sell.

Mary is generous and very charitable.

You never can get to the sick friend's bedside before Mary gets there.

Mary's Almost Perfect.

She takes care of children who are neglected at home. She invites her poor relations for long visits. She goes to read to her sick aunt, and Mary's grandmother never wants for a companion, or a pair of theater tickets, or a nice drive in a comfy limousine.

Mary reads and Mary writes a good letter.

Mary's fond of music, and she knows good music, too.

She likes poetry and always has the latest poet in the latest binding conveniently close to the reading-lamp.

Mary's a wizard with flowers. She can make three pinks and one rose and a handful of ferns look like a bridal bouquet, and anything she touches will grow for her.

Mary's good-tempered. I never saw her cross in my life.

Yet Mary's perfectly good husband disappeared one day and never came back, and somebody saw him in New Zealand, and he said he knew he was a brute, but he couldn't help it.

He loves Mary, he said, sincerely. He trusts her utterly and he respects her deeply—but he just simply couldn't live with her another minute, and that was that.

And we all wondered and guessed and speculated.

But the other day I went on an outing trip with Mary—we were gone for two days—and now I know all about it.

Mary is bossy—that's what's the matter with her.

We went in a friend's car with a friend's chauffeur and a friend's luncheon basket and a friend's vacuum bottle—but Mary bossed the whole affair from the minute we sat down in the car. Mary told the friend where to sit, and she tucked the lap-robe around me and insisted that I sit on one end of it.

I wasn't cold, at all—in fact, I was rather warm—but Mary said it was dusty, and that's all there was to it. I sat on the lap-robe and held it tight—and hated it.

She "Bossed" Everything.

There were two roads to go to our first stopping-place. Mary leaned over and told the chauffeur which one to take.

I had hoped we were going to take the other road, and later the friend told me that that was what she had planned. But Mary arranged it all and we didn't say a word.

When we got to the blue lake Mary told the chauffeur where to stop. Then she told him what rugs to bring for us to sit on and how to lay the tablecloth, and she unpacked the luncheon and poured the coffee, and then she thought it was cool and we'd better not sit too long in the shade after driving in the hot sun, and she changed the subject when we wanted to talk about something we were both interested in. She said it would do us good to get our minds off of it.

Every minute of that little outing was bossed by Mary till I felt as if I were a poor, old, tired horse, with a bit in my teeth and a harness on my back and a determined driver somewhere behind me.

No, I don't blame the husband at all. Mary is too bossy.

She really is. I wonder why someone doesn't tell her about it.

What Art Is Doing in the Tiny Realm of Baby Furniture

By Wanda Barton

LOOKING toward refitting the nursery in early fall, it is a good idea to make a tour of the shops and see what perfectly charming things may be procured for the purpose. Even the wee baby is not neglected in the modern improvement of old conveniences. For the old high chair is now equipped witih a bright tin tray that fits right into the wooden protection tray, so that the food prepared may be brought at feeding time and removed after the meal, leaving the wooden tray dry and clean.

The wee painted sets consist of a little four-poster bed, just like grown-ups, a small dressing-table desk, chairs of various kinds with an old-fashioned rocker, such as our grandmother gloried in so quaint in its diminutive proportions you just want to hug it. The furniture is, of course, painted a solid color, with effective decorations. Corn color is a favorite, with brown rings and tips on the posts of bed and leg and arms of chairs, with little painted medallions done in colors, figures, flowers, marines or wood scenes.

There is a good-sized toy chest with each set, painted to match, or else covered with one of the attractive nursery cretonnes. A three or four fold screen is another addition. For an extra attraction there is an almost life-sized wooden figure of Gretchen—or Katinka, it is hard to decide which—who is really the most fascinating clothes-tree with her wooden back full of little clothes hooks, and a wee coat-frame swung back from each shoulder.

This is but half of the wonders there are. For there is an oblong, low dining table, big enough for four or even six nursery folks to sit at comfortably in the little straight chairs with an arm chair at either end. The color of the furniture is soft gray, but the legs are wooden soldiers clad in black trousers, gay coats and bearskin hats like the "old guard."

There are also small tables and chairs for porch or lawn use where the children eat outdoors. These have wide, spreading legs so that they do not turn over easily on uneven surfaces and endanger those who are not quite steady on their legs.

Looking ahead, many parents buy the second size in the nursery sets of furniture, for the small ones are so quickly outgrown that it hardly pays to put as much money into them as is required. These sets are not at bargain prices, for they are novelties, and by getting the second size they may be used by the children up to at least eight years or even 10.

In most instances it is wise to decide on the hangings of the room and then have the play-box and screens covered to match—even the hammock-swing and bedspread should be covered with the same material. The nursery cretonnes are charming. There are not only the pretty floral patterns, but there are the Mother Goose figures. Alice in Wonderland and figures from the favorite fairy tales—all reproduced in most fascinating groupings and attractive colorings.

Children should be allowed to help select the cretonnes, if possible, which inspires a sense of ownership and pleasure in pretty things.

Place in saucepan.

Three quarters cup of sugar, ¾ cup of water, 6 level tablespoons of cornstarch; stir to dissolve sugar and starch; bring to boiling point and add yolks of three eggs, ¼ cup of butter, grated rind of one lemon and juice of two lemons.

A CONTINUED STORY

"Oh, he does—does he?" a voice returned in bland sarcasm. "Well, I'm very sorry myself then, but I guess he'll have to change his mind! Pardon me, Miss Capriano, if I——"

A quick, heavy step sounded in the hallway. Nicolo Capriano's alert and listening attitude was gone in a flash. He pushed himself up in the bed, and held himself there with one hand, and the other outflung, knotted into a fist, he shook violently in the direction of the door, as the figure of the plain-clothesman appeared on the threshold.

Old Nicolo Capriano was apparently in the throes of a towering passion.

"Get out of here!" he screamed. "Did my daughter not tell you to get out! Go away! I want nothing to do with you! Curse you—and all the rest of the police with you! Can you not leave old Nicolo Capriano to die in peace—eh?"

"That's all right!" said Barjan coolly. He glanced over his shoulder. Teresa was standing just outside in the hall behind him. "Pardon me," he said again—and closed the door upon her. "Now then"—he faced Nicolo Capriano once more—"there's no use kicking up all this dust. It won't get you anywhere, Nicolo. There's a little matter that I want to talk to you about, and that I'm going to talk to you about whether you like it or not—that's all there is to it. And we'll get right to the point. What do you know about that affair in the park last night?"

Nicolo Capriano sank back on his pillows, with a furious snarl. He still shook his fist at the officer.

"What should I know about your miserable affairs!" he shouted. "I know nothing about any park! I know nothing at all! Why do you not leave me in peace—eh? For fifteen years this has gone on, always spying on Nicolo Capriano, and for fifteen years Nicolo Capriano has not lifted a finger against the law."

"That is true—as far as we know," said Barjan calmly. "But there's a little record that goes back beyond those fifteen years, Nicolo, that keeps us a little chummy with you—and you've been valuable at times, Nicolo."

"Bah!" Nicolo Capriano spat the exclamation viciously at the other.

"About last night," suggested Barjan patiently. "It's rather in your line. I thought perhaps you might be able to give us a little help that would put us on the right track."

"I don't know what you're talking about!" snapped Nicolo Capriano.

"I'm talking about the man that was blown to pieces by a bomb." Barjan was still patient.

Nicolo Capriano's eyes showed the first gleam of interest.

"I didn't know there was any man blown up." His tone appeared to mingle the rage and antagonism that he had first exhibited with a now and suddenly awakened curiosity. "I didn't know there was any man blown up," he repeated.

"That's too bad!" said Barjan with mock resignation—and settled himself deliberately in a chair at the bedside. "I guess, then, you're the only man in San Francisco who doesn't."

"You fool!" Nicolo Capriano rasped in rage again. "I've been bed-ridden for three years—and I wish to God you had been, too!" He choked and coughed a little. He eyed Barjan malevolently. "I tell you this is the first I've heard of it. I don't hang about the street corners picking up the news! Don't sit there with your silly, smirking police face, trying to see how smart you can be! What information do you expect to get out of me like that? When I know nothing, I can tell nothing, can I? Who was the man?"

"That's what we want to know," said Barjan pleasantlyy. "And, look here, Nicolo, I'm not here to rile you. All that was left was a few fragments of park bench, man, arc-light standard, and a piece or two of what was evidently a bomb."

"What time was this?" Nicolo Capriano's eyes were on the foot of the bed.

"Three o'clock this morning," Barjan answered.

The old bomb king's fingers began to pluck at the [illegible]. A minute passed. His eyes, from the foot of the bed, fixed for an instant moodily on Barjan's face—and sought the foot of the bed again.

Barjan broke the silence.

"So you do know something about it, eh, Nicolo?" he prodded softly.

"I didn't know anything had happened until you said so," returned Nicolo Capriano curtly. "But seeing it has happened, maybe I——" He cut his words off short, and eyed the plain-clothesman again. "Is the man dead?" he demanded, with well-simulated sudden suspicion. "You aren't lying to me—eh? I trust none of you!"

"Dead!" ejaculated Barjan almost hysterically. "Good God—dead! Didn't I tell you he was blown into unrecognizable atoms!"

The sharp, black eyes lingered a little longer on Barjan's face. The result appeared finally to allay Nicolo Capriano's suspicions.

"Well, all right, then I'll tell you," he said, but there was a grudging note still in the old bomb king's voice. "It can't do the man any harm if he's dead. I guess you'll know who it is. It's the fellow who pulled that hundred thousand dollar robbery about five years ago on old man Tydman—the fellow that went by the name of Dave Henderson. I don't know whether that's his real name or not."

"What!" shouted Barjan. He had lost his composure. He was up from his chair, and staring wildly at the old man on the bed. "You're crazy!" he jerked out suddenly. "Either you're lying to me, or you're off your nut! You——"

Nicolo Capriano was in a towering rage in an instant.

"You get out of here!" he screamed. "You get to hell out of here. I didn't ask you to come, and I don't give a damn whether it was Dave Henderson or a polact'. It's nothing to do with me! It's your hunt—so go and hunt somewhere else! I'm lying, or I'm off my nut, am I? Well, you get to hell out of here! Go on!" He shook a frantic fist at Barjan, and, choking, coughing, pulled himself up in bed again, and pointed to the door. "Do you hear? Get out!"

Barjan shifted uneasily in alarm. Nicolo Capriano's coughing spell had developed into a paroxysm that was genuine enough.

"Look here," said Barjan, in a pacifying tone, "don't excite yourself like that. I take back what I said. You gave me a jolt for a minute, that's all. But you've got the wrong dope somehow, Nicolo. Whoever it was, it wasn't Dave Henderson. The man was too badly smashed up to be recognized, but there was at least some of his clothing left. Dave Henderson was followed all day yesterday by the police from the minute he left the penitentiary, and he didn't buy any clothes. Dave Henderson had on a black prison suit—and this man hadn't."

"I'm satisfied, if you are!" he snarled. "Go on—get out!"

Barjan frowned a little helplessly now.

"But I'm not satisfied," he admitted earnestly. "Look here, Nicolo, for the love of Mike, keep your temper, and let's get to the bottom of this. For some reason you seem to think it was Dave Henderson. I know it wasn't; but I've got to know what started you off on that track. Those clothes——"

"You're a damn fool!" Nicolo Capriano, apparently slightly mollified, was jeering now. "Those clothes—ha, ha! It is like the police! And so old Nicolo is off his nut—eh? Well, I will show you!" He raised his voice and called his daughter. "Teresa' my little one," he said, as the door opened and she appeared, "bring me the clothes that young man had on last night."

"What's that you say!" exclaimed Barjan in sudden excitement.

"Wait!" said Nicolo Capriano ungraciously.

Teresa was back in a moment with an armful of clothing, which, at her father's direction, she deposited on the foot of the bed.

Nicolo Capriano waved her from the room. He leered at Barjan.

"Well, are those the clothes there that you and your police are using to blindfold your eyes with, or are they not—eh? Are those Dave Henderson's clothes?"

Barjan had already pounced upon the clothing, and was pawing it over feverishly.

"Good God—yes!" he burst out sharply.

"And the clothes that the dead man had on—let me see"—Nicolo Capriano's voice was tauntingly triumphant, as, with eyes half closed, visualizing for himself the attire of one Ignace Ferroni, he slowly enumerated the various articles of dress worn by the actual victim of the explosion. He looked at Barjan maliciously, as he finished. "Well," he demanded, "was there enough left of what the man had on to identify any of those things? If so——" Nicolo Capriano shrugged his shoulders by way of finality.

"Yes, yes!" Barjan's excitement was almost beyond his control. "Yes, that is what he wore, but—good Lord, Capriano!—what does this mean? I don't understand!"

"About the clothes?" inquired Nicolo Capriano caustically. "But I should know what he had on since they were my clothes—eh? And you have only to look at the ones there on the bed to find out for yourself why I gave him some that, though I do not say they were new, for I have not bought any clothes in the three damnable and cursed years that I have lain here, were at least not all torn to pieces—eh?"

Barjan was pacing up and down the room now. When the other's back was turned, Nicolo Capriano permitted a sinister and mocking smile to hover on his lips; when Barjan faced the bed, Nicolo Capriano eyed the officer with a sour contempt into which he injected a sort of viciously triumphant self-vindication.

"Come across with the rest!" said Barjan abruptly. "How did Dave Henderson come here to you? And what about that bomb? Did you give it to him?"

Nicolo Capriano's convenient irascibility was instantly at his command again. He scowled at Barjan, and his scranny fist was flourished under Barjan's nose.

"No, I didn't!" he snarled. "And you know well enough that I didn't. You will try to make me out the guilty man now—eh—just because I was fool enough to help you out of your muddle!"

Barjan became diplomatic again.

What a Radical Chang in Climate Demands of

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A FRIEND of mine has a wild garden in the corner of his city lot. Here are to be found strange and unusual shrubs and plants, vegetation native to the woods and marshes, the out-of-the-way places of the country.

Yesterday my friend called on me. When I inquired about his garden he said it never does well late in the season, that the city water doesn't agree with it.

"Why," he said, "you might as well feed mince pie to a horse, as to expect wild flowers to live on water out of the hose!"

My friend has his own ideas about a lot of things, but this is a poorly-founded theory. However, there may be some truth in it. Undoubtedly a plant thrives best in its native soil, in the atmosphere and surroundings which naturally belong to it.

If a plant is forced to depend upon water that contains purifying chemicals, or is tainted by pollution of some sort, I can see why that water might have an unfavorable effect upon that plant. But the chief and almost the only function of water is to supply moisture. Plants differ in the ways moisture is acceptable. Some want a lot of water and want it to bathe the roots. Others require merely sprinkling of the leaves.

The trouble with the artificial wild garden, as I view it, is that great numbers of plants are assembled from forest and field, from marsh and sand, from bog and desert. Not all can thrive in the surroundings which are so favorable to a few.

It is just the same with the human family. Persons who lived as their ancestors did, for generations in one particular climate, have difficulty in adapting themselves to a different section of the earth.

When corn is to be roasted for a luncheon dish, it may be easily prepared in the following way:

Roast Corn.

Husk and boil corn in the way already described, lift the ears and have ready a gridiron over hot coals. Place the ears upon this. Have a long-handled fork to turn them around with as rapidly as they roast. Remove them to a hot platter and butter them, dust them with a little salt, cover and serve at once. This is a delicious way to serve corn. It may also be roasted in a gas boiler. This is a harder way to roast it well and evenly, as it needs to be closely watched.

Kentucky Corn Pudding.

Cut enough freshly-husked young corn from the cob to make one pint. In cutting, hold the cob in the left hand and cut down the rows, not too deep to get the husks, then with the back of the knife scrape down carefully to get the milk. Add a half teaspoonful of salt, a salt spoonful of pepper, a tablespoonful of sugar and the yolks of three eggs beaten into a half pint of very rich milk. Pour the mixture into a buttered pudding-dish after adding to it a tablespoonful of melted butter. Bake until set in the middle, from 20 to 25 minutes or more, depending on the oven.

Fresh Corn Souffle.

Cut enough fresh young corn from the cobs to make a large cupful. Beat into the corn three fresh eggs, add a saltspoonful of salt, a little pepper and a teaspoonful of sugar. Pour in buttered souffle-dishes and bake 10 minutes in a good brisk oven. Serve the souffle as soon as it is cooked. This makes an excellent luncheon dish.

Mexican Bake.

Add to a pint of fresh corn just cut from the cobs a finely-minced onion and a minced pepper, a tablespoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, pepper, salt, the drained solid part of a small can of tomatoes, or three cut-up fresh ones and one beaten egg. After mixing, add a little of the tomato juice if it seems too dry. Pour into a buttered baking-dish, sprinkle with a little grated cheese and bake. This may be served instead of a meat dish.

Nakomis Salad.

Add to a cupful of corn freshly cut from hot, boiled corn-cobs, a minced pepper, a grated onion, a cupful of chopped celery and four slices of broiled bacon diced. Mix these ingredients, then place in tomatoes that have been hollowed out ready for the filling. Serve on lettuce leaves. Heap the salad with Russian dressing.

Curiosity Proves Too Much for the Young Chuck.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

'Tis curiosity that leads
Where danger lurks, nor caution heeds.
—Old Mother Nature.

WHEN Old Mr. Toad left him, the young Chuck, who had run away from home, sat in the bushes at the head of the Long Lane and did the first real thinking he had ever done in all his life. Down in his heart he knew that the advice of Old Mr. Toad to go back home was good, sound advice. But he wouldn't admit it. No, sir, he wouldn't admit it.

"Pooh! Pooh!" said he. "That funny, little, homely fellow probably has reason to be afraid. If I were no bigger than he I would be afraid. Of course, there must be some dangers, but I guess I am big enough and smart enough to avoid them. Redtail the Hawk will not get another chance at me, for I shall keep my eyes open for him. As for other enemies, I guess I am smart enough to keep out of their way."

He peeped out of the bushes toward Farmer Brown's barnyard. It looked most interesting up there. Old Mr. Toad had advised him not to go any farther in that direction. He had told him that it was no place for him up there. But the more he watched the more curious he became. He saw some big birds walking about, and they didn't seem to be at all afraid. Of course, they were the hens of Farmer Brown's Boy, and so, of course, were at home. But the young Chuck didn't know this. They were the first hens he ever had seen.

"If it is safe for them it is safe for me," said he to himself. "I can run over there and have a look around, and then run back again. There is no sense in being afraid when there is nothing to be afraid of."

Still the young Chuck hesitated. Then he happened to think that perhaps his mother, Polly Chuck, would come looking for him. He knew that if she found him he would have to go back home. Then his curiosity wouldn't be satisfied. He looked all around up in the blue, blue sky. No where could he see Redtail the Hawk. He looked over to where those hens were contentedly scratching in the barnyard. Never had he seen a more peaceful scene. He crept a few feet byond the bushes and sat up. There he sat for some time, looking this way and that way, every way.

"If it's safe for them it is safe for me," said he to himself.

"It's silly to be afraid," said he. "There isn't a thing to be afraid of. I'm going over there."

Once more he looked all around. Then he dropped down and started straight for Farmer Brown's barnyard. He felt the thrill of adventure. He was going to see things he never had seen before. He was really out in the Great World. He elt very big and very bold. But as he ran, he had enough sense to try to keep out of sight as much as possible. He kept in the tallest grass. And so at last he came to the edge of Farmer Brown's barnyard.

WORDS of WISE MEN

The wise man makes his own fortune.

Wealth is a good servant, but a very bad mistress.

Culture is "to know the best that has been said and thought in the world."

Make it a rule to believe only what you understand.

He that will not reason is a bigot, he that cannot reason is a fool and he that dares not reason is a slave.

There is a mode in plays as well as clothes.

Nature works on a method of all for each and each for all.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself.

Nothing astonishes men so much as common sense and plain dealing.

He makes a false wife who suspects a true.

Do You Choose Your Food for Beauty?

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

DO you realize that the food you eat has a very direct influence on your beauty? I believe more women would be more keenly interested in planning menus and ordering foods if they realized that the food they eat every day affects immediately the texture of their skin, the gloss of their hair and the sparkle of their eyes.

The kind and the amount have everything to do with the effect your food has upon your beauty. Women in general are more concerned with keeping food down to a certain amount a day than with seeing that they eat up to a certain quantity. For many women, especially those nearing middle age, have to watch their weights very, very carefully.

However, those who are in danger of taking on too much fleshy tissue can watch their diets carefully and regulate their exercise. Without giving up food that you like, you can eat it in small quantities along with other foods that are not fattening, and by combining this watchfulness with regular daily exercise, you should keep the matter of weight well in hand without letting it become a bugbear to you.

What I want to talk to you about is nutrition. Nutrition is not solely a matter of heat and energy-producing foods, you know—or if you don't know, I want to impress the fact upon you, for its importance cannot be overestimated. You could eat heartily of certain kinds of foods and still be undernourished, for it takes a well-balanced diet containing all the body-building foods, to make for perfect nourishment.

Now, if you like creamed potatoes, and beans with tomato sauce, and pastries and candies, you are very much in danger of turning your attention to these things to the exclusion of other foods that you need more.

If you would insure getting your daily amount of vitamines and mineral salts, turn your attention to lettuce, spinach, butter and eggs. These things put iron in your blood, make you grow strong and healthy with a complexion that shows good color, eyes that sparkle and limbs that are strong. The growth-producing vitamines are supplied in abundance by these foods as well as iron, which enriches your blood and helps build bone for you.

Spinach can be prepared in many delightful ways, and one of the best is creamed. At a smart hotel the other day I ordered creamed spinach, which was a beautiful green color, fine as a pulp, light and fluffy and deliciously seasoned. It's truly no hardship to partake of such a dish when we know it is rich in health and beauty-giving properties.

And as for lettuce, this tempting leaf has really become a hobby of mine. It can be eaten with so many different and delicious dressings and I feel that at every mouthful I am adding iron to my blood and sparkle to my eye. It may interest you to know that lettuce was popular with Oriental people many long years before it was introduced into England during the days of Queen Elizabeth. It has every right to be considered a beauty food, and it certainly adds attractiveness to any dish which it garnishes.

THE greatest achievements throughout the ages have been those discoveries and inventions which have made it possible for men to do the work of the world better and at the same time gain the leisure needed to develop their own powers.

No single class of achievements has done more to overcome the obstacles which confronted mankind in his climb toward better things than those which are grouped about the discovery of petroleum. From this source he first secured cheap and abundant light, lubricants and power.

The discovery of kerosene gave him a clear, dependable light which made systematic night study possible.

The development of unnumbered lubricants made the operation of the countless machines which serve the world practical.

The refining of gasoline made the internal combustion automotive engine practicable.

In the development of these helps, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been a leader.

For years it has maintained at its refineries, research laboratories and testing stations where men were constantly at work finding new uses for petroleum, and as the discoveries have been proved of practical worth they have been given to the world.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has done more than develop a large number of products and manufacture them in quantities. It has priced them at reasonable figures and has organized a comprehensive system of distribution which makes it possible for any man in the ten Middle Western States served by the Company to get what he wants quickly and easily.

Of these achievements the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is justly proud—particularly so, as the public has paid no premium for the enjoyment of these comforts.

In contradistinction, every additional product that this Company is able to take from petroleum bears its just proportion of the total manufacturing expense and tends to keep down the manufacturing cost and the selling price of all petroleum products.

Thus do the activities of a big organization, founded and operated on the principles of equity, fairness and justice, accrue to the benefits of the public for the common good.

The Man on the Sandbox

by L. C. Davis

A GLORIOUS VICTORY.

IT was a summer evening,
Urb Shocker's work was done;
The Yankees had been put to rout
The Austinites had won.
And from the tribe of Huggins he
Had grabbed his only victory.

The Yanks had taken Shocker's taw
Whenever they had met;
But all the friends of Urban knew
That he would get 'em yet.
And when he trimmed them 5 to 3
It was a glorious victory.

It was a noble sight to see
After the game was won,
Despite the fact that Babe had made.
His thirtieth home-run.
And all the rooters did agree
That 'twas a glorious victory.

WHY NOT?

The White Sox have sued an insurance company for $10,000 on a rain policy. Why not give them a rain check?

Rain insurance is unsatisfactory at the best, there being so many conflicting ideas as to what constitutes a rain. If Noah had carried rain insurance the company would probably have claimed that he didn't know the difference between a flood and a local shower.

"Former Navy Secretary Stages Hunt for Shirt."

Well, there's no closed season on hunting shirts. The best way to bring down a shirt is to put salt on its tail.

We trust, however, that Josephus will not be forced to stay in bed until the errant shirt is run to cover.

October is the prettiest month in the year. It is Indian summer when Dame Nature puts on her paint and feathers.

THE FUTURE.

HE who fights and saves his jack
Need have no fear of "going back."
For him, when he is old and fat,
His friends won't have to pass the hat.

TOO SURE.

Steps should be taken by the major leagues to make the world's series a movable feast. Some of the towns besides New York would like to cut in on the melon once in a while.

New York ought to be pretty well fed up on world's series melons by this time. Too much is sufficient, as the feller sez.

St. Louis managed to get a piece of the rind last year but it didn't taste so good after having our mouths all fixed for a chunk of the heart.

Carl Mays may drop out of the major leagues this year but his underhand ball seems to be safe in the hands of Howard Ehmke.
